CHICAGO HAILS 4TH TODAY IN PATRIOT SPIRIT

3½ Million Persons Will Celebrate.

BY KATHLEEN McLAUGHLIN.

Its siege of far flung dimensions, three and a half million Chicagoans will unite today in a demonstration of patriotism commemorating 155 years of American independence. It will be a quieter, saner performance than in former years, but as exuberant as the crack in the Liberty bell.

For the most part the double holiday, today and Sunday, will be more vacation-like and less sensational than previous celebrations. It will discourage fireworks and the attendant evils of missing fingers, blinded eyes and maimed lives, and will encourage the less noisy and more patriotic programs such as that in Illinois Central park at Berwyn, where State's Attorney John A. Swanson will be the speaker at 7 o'clock tonight. Most of the suburbs are prepared to follow suit in the spirit of their festivities.

Auto Throng Highways.

Caravans of automobile tourists, heading for the play areas of Michigan, Indiana, Wisconsin and other adjoining states, began their departure from Chicago on Thursday night, and grew in volume as the hours passed. Last night the traffic load had attained unprecedented proportions. It is expected to reach its peak this morning, with the tide of travel back toward the city scheduled to continue from all directions between the hours of 6 and 9 p. m. tomorrow.

Handicapped by the torrid weather of earlier in the week, Chicagoans relied at the weather man's forecast of cool weather over the week-end. They will be fair, with moderate temperatures, while tomorrow will become cloudy, with a probability of showers in the evening.

By far the greatest single rendezvous for the throngs of merrymakers will be in the forest preserve district. More than seventy-five organized picnics are expected to attract holiday crowds totaling 500,000, according to Emmett Wheelan, president of the county board. The largest group will be that of the Des Plaines post of the American Legion.

Forest Preserves Ready.

Preparations to handle this gigantic event have already been made, Charles G. Sauers, general superintendent of the forest preserve district, announced yesterday. Several hundred additional concrete fireplaces have been placed at the various picnic grounds, he said, about 1,000 new tables have been provided, and other facilities have been increased.

For the first time, the exploding of fireworks in the forest preserve has been banned by order of the county board because of the double hazard of personal injuries and forest fires. Roving picnickers have been permitted to follow their own desires, but the size of the crowds and the recent heat wave decided the matter, and the ban was issued.

Suburbs Arrange Programs.

In the suburban area, individual communities were ready to launch into their separate programs. One of the most ambitious was that of Oak Park, to be presented in the high school stadium at 7:45 o'clock tonight. A band concert, vaudeville stunts, speeches and a grand fireworks display were on the calendar, and 40,000 spectators are expected if the weather continues favorable.

Oak Park's Attorney Swanson's address at Berwyn, at 31st and East avenue at 7 o'clock tonight, is to be followed with a pyrotechnic display. La Grange also plans to stage a fireworks display, and a carnival will be held in connection with it. Maywood has arranged for boxing bouts as an accompaniment to the Roman candles, fireworks and rockets to be set off under official auspices.

Celebrations on North Shore.

Along the north shore most of the suburbs have banned fireworks within their borders, some following up the edict with arrests for exploding them within the community limits. Most of them, however, have provided official festivities as a substitute.

Evanston will stage a parade at 11

REFEREE HALTS BOUT AFTER NINE COUNT IN 15TH

Champ Too Strong for Stribling.

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Cleveland, O., July 3.—Willie Stribling of Macon, Ga., went down to defeat tonight by a technical knockout in the fifteenth round of his fight with Max Schmeling, the heavyweight champion of the world, in the Cleveland Municipal stadium. A crowd estimated at 35,000, with gate receipts of $375,000, saw the fight.

Fourteen seconds before the final bell would have rung to end Stribling's agony of fatigue and punishment, George Blake, the referee, stepped in, in response to an unspoken appeal from Schmeling to spare Willie one more punch on his unprotected jaw which probably would have knocked him unconscious.

For six rounds Stribling had been doddering around the ring on tremulous legs, peering at the grinning young German champion through eyes almost closed as Schmeling hacked his face with little cutting right hand jolts or drummed on his body with both of his fists.

Down for Count of Nine.

And for the last four rounds, Stribling had been fighting only to last until the final bell, but his strength failed and he met his first knockout in a ten year career of professional fighting in the greatest opportunity among the many that a friendly public gave him.

Stribling was down for nine seconds in his own corner shortly before Blake went between the young men to raise Schmeling's right glove. Stribling had fallen limp on his side, stunned by a short right clip on the chin and for a few seconds it looked as if he would not come up. But as Blake, in a calm voice, spoke "Nine" in his ear, Willie heaved himself to a drooping, semi-erect attitude.

Staggers Toward Champion.

One shoulder dusted with rosin, Stribling staggered toward the young German on half bent knees to fall into a lifeless clinch. He laid his weight against the other young man and they drifted along the ropes toward Willie's corner again. There Schmeling cuffed him a few light touches on the face, and though he could have pushed him back to fire the finishing blow, the champion instead raised his eyes to Referee Blake and without speaking asked him to step in.

As the meaning of this disaster dawned on him, Stribbling lurched toward the center of the ring but Schmeling turned, stooped, took him by his knees and, lifting him up, bore him to his corner.

A Good Loser.

They started to sponge his face but he hoisted himself to his feet and stumbled across the ring as Schmeling was making a few remarks into the microphone. Schmeling turned from the broadcast, threw an arm over Willie's shoulder, and paid him some polite respects. Stribling turned to the microphone and said simply that he had lost in a fair fight. His bearing appeared to be that of a thoroughly convinced and thoroughly chivalrous loser.

The fight had been as clean as an amateur bout throughout with the single exception of one instant in an early round when Schmeling seemed not to hear Blake's soft spoken "Break" and whipped up a left to

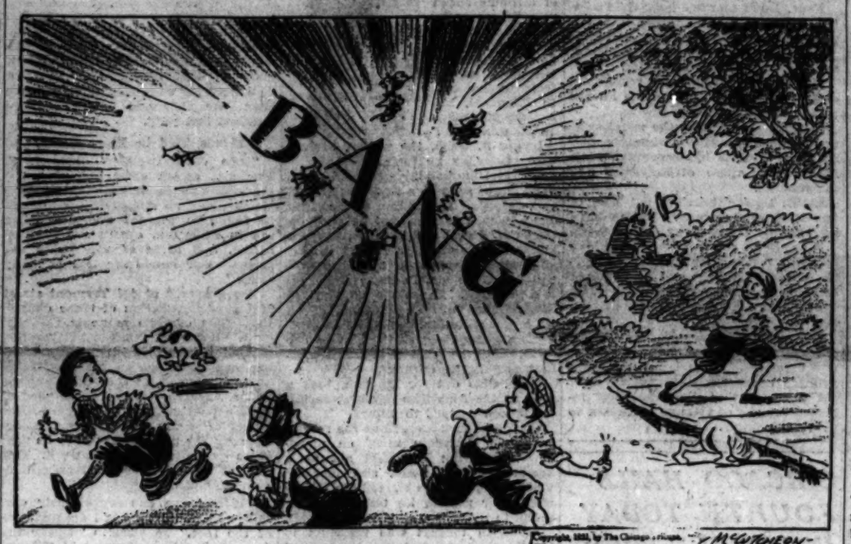
THE LOUDEST SHOT AND THE LONGEST ECHO

"The shot heard round the world."



The echo, one hundred and fifty-six years later.

Captain Meets a Pieman with a Load of Pies

Earl Dunbar, 42 years old, general manager of the Dunbar Watch Service at 3037 West Madison street, is known as the captain in his organization. Frank Whalen, 40 years old, 2821 Lowe avenue, who purchased a one-third interest in the business a month ago, was granted the title of the sergeant.

Capt. Dunbar and Sergt. Whalen went out yesterday to make collections from the clients to whom they furnish reliable, alert, uniformed watchmen, both day and night, as advertised.

They went in Sergt. Whalen's car. It was a new, shiny sedan, which the sergeant had presented to his bride, the former Elizabeth Kiermeier, on the occasion of their wedding a week ago. But it was the captain who did the driving and the collecting, too. The sergeant sat in the car. That's the last he remembered.

All Frank Remembers.

Last night in the Mother Cabrini hospital he remembered that some collections had been made and that the captain, as he emerged from stores and restaurants, seemed to wipe his mouth with the back of his hand. He also remembered last night that he had reached Polk street and Racine avenue at around 1:30 p. m. From then until 3 p. m., when he woke up in the hospital with nineteen yards of bandage around his head, his mind was a blank.

At 1:30, it was later discovered, the sergeant's wife's car, driven by the captain, had collided violently with a pie wagon of the Glees Baking company at Polk and Racine. Pies, the sergeant, the captain and the new sedan and the truck were all rather tangled for a period.

When Sergt. Whalen's head cleared at the hospital he sent for his wife and she took him home. There Mrs. Whalen became insistent about what had happened to her wedding present. The sergeant remembered that the captain had it last.

The Captain Is Found.

So Mrs. Whalen, accompanied by her 22 year old son, Walter Kiermeier, went to look for Capt. Dunbar. They discovered him in a restaurant at 20th and Morgan streets. There Walter dissembled a little.

"The old man is feeling fine and laughing," he said. "He would like to see you. Come along; there's a taxi waiting for you."

But when the captain got into the taxicab with Walter and his mother, Mrs. Whalen gave the order to drive to the Maxwell street police station. At her request Capt. Dunbar was locked in a cell until he remembered where the car was. It took him half an hour to perform the feat. Then he led the bride and her son to a garage at 1141 Polk street.

There was the sedan. It could no longer be regarded as a new car. It was about as scrambled as the pies it had met.

The party melted away. The captain moved off. So did Walter. And so did Mrs. Whalen, but not before she had handed around a few of the cards of the Dunbar Watch service.

"Don't Take Chances," it read. "Let Us Protect Your Property."

Accused of Trying to Sell Stolen Chicago Bank Bonds

Boston, Mass., July 3.—(AP)—Newman J. Lear, 38, of Chelsea, Mass., was arrested today when he returned to a brokerage office to collect $13,000 for allegedly stolen bonds he had offered for sale. Police said the bonds were part of $50,000 worth stolen from the First National Bank of Chicago in 1926. Lear was held in $20,000 bond on charges of larceny and receiving stolen property.

Missing Wife Is Found Slain in City Sewer

The mutilated body of a woman, identified as Mrs. Emily Chorak, 30 years old, who had been missing from her home at 9747 Houston avenue since June 4, was taken from a manhole of a city sewer in 98th street, just east of Houston avenue, early this morning. The woman's head apparently had been crushed by a heavy blow, according to the South Chicago police, who expressed the belief that she had been slain and her body tossed in the manhole several weeks ago.

The body was discovered by Samuel Sorak, 18 years old, 9800 Houston avenue, a student at Bowen High school. Lifting the manhole cover as a prank yesterday afternoon, he later told the police, he saw the body lying eight feet down at the bottom of the pit. Frightened at his discovery, the youth did not tell the police, but confided in Mrs. Nell Arnold, owner of a bakery at 9717 Commercial avenue.

Mrs. Arnold said that at first she did not believe the youth's story, but shortly before midnight he went to her again and insisted it was true. Then she called the police.

The victim was identified by neighbors and Mrs. Margaret Kornich, 9627 Commercial avenue, a sister of the dead woman's husband, John Chorak. According to Glisco Kurtalga, 3042 East 98th street, the Choraks' landlord, Chorak disappeared on June 6, two days after his wife was reported missing to the police. Squads were seeking him early this morning.

Neighbors told the police that the couple had quarreled and Mrs. Kornich said her brother had accused his wife of being too friendly with other men. Mrs. Chorak had been married twice before, her sister-in-law said.

CLARA BACK IN HOLLYWOOD, LESS PLUMP, TANNED

Hollywood, Cal., July 3.—(AP)—Clara Bow, her flaming red hair bleached silver, not quite so plump, and tanned from the rays of a desert sun, was back in Hollywood tonight.

The former moving picture star, who was released from her Paramount contract at her request, has spent several weeks at the ranch of Rex Bell, her friend, near Nipton, Cal.

Bell, a movie cowboy, came back to work in a picture, and Clara said she had an appointment with a dentist. She intends to return to the ranch to complete a rest ordered by physicians, following a recent breakdown.

Pope Charges Duce 'Fosters' Pagan Ideas

VATICAN CITY, July 4.—[Saturday.]—(AP)—In a vigorously worded encyclical letter, Pope Pius XI today presents his first detailed defense of the disbanded Catholic Action organization since the controversy between the holy see and the Italian government arose several weeks ago.

It is an unqualified denial of Fascist charges that the Catholic Action participated in political activities, and without mentioning the Fascist party by name the encyclical refers to "irreverences and violences which took place in the presence of and with the participation of members of a political party."

"It is clear," the letter says, "that all these accusations [against Catholic Action] are nothing but a pretext. . . We dare to say even the Catholic Action itself is a pretext.

"That which was desired and that which was attempted was to tear away from the Catholic Action society, and through this process to tear away from the church the young, all the young. . .

"This confirmation is made all the more explicit and categorical, we were almost about to say solemn and violent, by the one who not only represents all, but who can do all and who confirms it in official or quasi-official publications dedicated to the young."

Refers to Mussolini.

This latter, as well as similar statements, was interpreted as a reference to Premier Mussolini.

"We cannot be grateful to one," the pontiff writes in another section, "who, after putting out of existence socialism and anti-religious organizations, has permitted them to be so generally readmitted, and has made them even stronger and more dangerous, inasmuch as they are now hidden and also protected by their new uniform."

"You ask us," the encyclical reads, "what is to be thought about the formula of an oath which even little boys and girls are obliged to take about executing orders without discussion, from an authority which can give orders against all truth and justice. The answer from the Catholic point of view and also from a human point of view is inevitably only one: Such an oath as it stands is illicit."

Addressed to Church Heads.

This encyclical letter is entitled "Concerning 'Catholic Action.'" It is addressed to the dignitaries of the church.

The pontiff expresses "exquisite satisfaction that Catholic organizations of all countries have expressed their astonishment and grief" to see the society "persecuted and assailed here in the very center of the apostolic hierarchy."

Particularly pleasing, he writes, are the "convincing proofs that these organizations have remained docile in refraining absolutely from any and every kind of political activity."

Disbanding of the Catholic Action in Italy, he declared, was carried out with the use of tactics which would give the impression that action was being taken against a dangerous organization of criminals.

"It is noteworthy," he writes, "that even among the officers of the law, charged to carry out these orders of suppression, there were many who showed that they were almost asking pardon for doing that which they had been commanded to do. We have reserved for them a special blessing.

"A Real Pagan Worship."

"But, in sad contrast to the manner of these officials, there were many acts of violence, extending even to the striking of blows and the drawing of blood.

"How many insults in the press, injurious words and acts against things and persons, not excluding ourself, preceded, accompanied, and followed the carrying into effect of this lightningline police order."

"We find ourselves," the pontiff writes, "in the presence of facts which reveal the proposal, already in great part actually put into effect, to monopolize completely the young, . . and all for the exclusive advantage of a party, of a régime, which clearly resolves itself into a true and real pagan worship of the state."

Bomb Damages Laundry; Owner Tells of Threats

A bomb placed in the doorway of the Cornelia Hand laundry at 748 Cornelia avenue early this morning blew out windows in the front of the laundry and a delicatessen store next door, causing damage estimated at $500. Jacob Karp, 2054 Ridgeway avenue, owner of the laundry, said he had been threatened with trouble unless he joined an association, but he refused to reveal the association's name to the police.

PARIS STAND ON 'MINOR POINTS' HOLDS UP PACT

Hindenburg to Hoover

Washington, D. C., July 3.—(AP)—President von Hindenburg tonight sent this message to President Hoover:

"I should like to convey to you my heartiest congratulations on the anniversary of the day when the American people obtained their independence. I would add my warmest wishes for your personal well being as well as for the continued welfare and happiness of the American people.

"I sincerely hope that relations existing between the United States and Germany will steadily grow firmer and that the magnanimous action started by you will be a blessing for the whole world."

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.

PARIS, July 4 [Saturday].—At 12:30 o'clock this morning, the French and American negotiators reached what might rightly be described in the professional jargon of those who handle such matters as "virtually a complete accord in principle" on President Hoover's moratorium offer. More exactly, it can virtually be stated that it won't be long now.

Two things notably cheated the world out of getting a moratorium accord less virtual and more complete for a Fourth of July present—the chaotic condition of the French chamber of deputies and a sudden attack of realism on the part of the idealistic British Labor government.

Laval Adjourns Parliament.

The greatest menace to the Hoover plan was sidetracked when Premier Laval at 2:30 a. m. read a decree sending the senate and chamber on vacation for the summer. The latter body had turned definitely against any compromise with America since the debate last week, and was plotting to overthrow the government in order to wreck the scheme. Laval's action was greeted with a violent demonstration of hissing and booing. One deputy, Franklin-Bouillon, attacked the premier physically, but was dragged away.

The British objections, which inspired some rather sinister remarks by Chancellor of the Exchequer Philip Snowden in the house of commons this afternoon, involve only some $25,000,000, which is not considered too serious. Mr. Snowden's remarks were to the effect that Britain is not prepared to make further sacrifices in connection with the Hoover plan unless the other powers are ready to cooperate.

Wants Share of Fund.

His statement referred to the French suggestion that Britain should forego her share of the $125,000,000 guarantee fund which France is required to deposit in the Bank for International Settlements in event of Germany asking a moratorium under the Young plan.

It can be stated that definite and considerable progress was made tonight. Out of four points of difference between the French and American governments, two were definitely eliminated and the remaining two were officially described as of "lesser importance." They will be the subject of a cabinet meeting tomorrow and renewed conversations with the Americans. The negotiation probably will be wound up by Monday.

Of the two points which were settled tonight, one is known definitely to be the question of earmarking part of the German unconditional annuity for other needy central European powers. The French have given in on this point.

15 Years to Repay Loan.

The other point settled is believed to concern the time to be allowed Germany to pay back the loan from the unconditional payment. This probably will be fixed at around fifteen years.

This leaves the question of whether the $125,000,000 annuity payment should be loaned directly to the German government or to German industry, and the knotty problem of the guarantee fund, which France wishes to be released from depositing.

It can easily be seen that an "agreement in principle" on these points would be meaningless, and since they are the only real stickers in the negotiations, it is hard to see with the naked eye why the negotiators were so optimistic at the close of tonight's conference. The fact remains that they were.

Mellon and Edge in High Hats.

Tonight's conversation took place in the negotiators' usual squatting place—the ministry of interior—following a meeting of the French cabinet this afternoon. Secretary of the Treasury Mellon and Ambassador Edge arrived in top hats and white ties and tail coats, having stopped off on their way at the annual Fourth of July banquet given by the American chamber of commerce. About fifteen minutes later Premier Laval left to sit on two Vesuviuses—the chamber and the senate—which, scouts informed him, were getting ready for an all night eruption.

The discussion over the guarantee fund tonight was particularly illustrative of the general tone of the conference. After a week of arguing every one agreed that no shylock was going to ask France to put up this deposit as long as the moratorium was in force and no payments coming in from Germany. Tonight the talk hinged on what would be done when and if Germany asked for a regular moratorium next year.

British Also Wonder.

It appears that the British have been thinking about this point, too, and decided that they would be entitled to the partial payments prescribed by the Young plan and that the French would have to make the $125,000,000 guarantee deposit.

These Machiavellian intimations from across the channel greatly upset the French. They refused to go any further until assured that the British would enter negotiations with the object of reaching an agreement to abandon their alleged intentions.

These subleties of European diplomacy were somewhat confusing to Mr. Mellon, who pointed out that Germany was in need of immediate relief and couldn't wait to have the whens and ifs settled. After further argument a purely Franco-American angle to the Young plan guarantee fund clause—whatever that may be—was agreed on.

French Have Another "But."

But the French insisted on making the arrangement conditional on acceptance by the British, and in the final communique at the close of the conference it was stated:

"An accord on the economic and financial aspects of the negotiations should, under reserve of adherence of the other interested powers, be attained in the near future."

This seems to imply a general conference of the Young plan signatories being called, and this would hold up the negotiations many weeks longer. It is believed, however, that the necessary adhesions—principally British—can be obtained without formal conference, or, if not a formula can be found for applying the moratorium without waiting for the result of the conference.

Argue Over Wording.

The nearest the conference came to a real argument tonight was over the wording of a phrase in the communique describing the nature of the two points of difference still remaining between the two governments. The Americans wanted to call them "secondary," while Briand held out for "minor." After a lot of oratory in two languages over this question, they compromised on "lesser importance."

At 12:30 a. m. the conference broke up and the communique was read. It said:

"Mr. Mellon has given assurance that the American government has decided to accept continuation of payment by Germany of the unconditional annuity provided by the Young plan. Other differences in viewpoint have been reconciled. Those which remain are of lesser importance and will be discussed at a cabinet meeting this morning. An accord on the economic and financial aspects of the negotiations should, under reserve of adherence of the other interested powers, be attained at an early date."

Mr. Mellon and Ambassador Edge returned to the embassy to telephone the results of the deliberations to Washington. The time for the next Franco-American conversations has not been fixed, but they will be held some time tomorrow night.

PARIS TO AGREE TO DEBT PLAN, HOOVER BELIEF

Expects French Accord Momentarily.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 3.—[Special.]—The expected agreement with France on President Hoover's proposed debt moratorium still is hanging fire.

It was stated at the White House tonight that an acceptance by France of the President's proposal even in principle is yet lacking, but that the negotiations in Paris will be continued tomorrow.

When it was learned that the meeting between Secretary of the Treasury Mellon and the French government officials had adjourned Acting Secretary of State William R. Castle Jr. and Acting Secretary of the Treasury Ogden L. Mills joined the President at the executive office to hear Mr. Mellon's report by radiophone.

Ready for Rapidan Camp.

An announcement of an agreement was anticipated and Mr. Hoover had the White House limousine waiting at the door to carry him and his party to his Rapidan camp for the week-end as soon as the news should arrive. Four stenographers and mimeograph machine operators were being held in readiness to get out the formal statement the President intended to make and leave behind him as he sped away on his holiday.

The party in the executive office waited nearly an hour before the connection with Mr. Mellon was put through. Then what Mr. Mellon had to say was that France still is holding out on some parts, particularly that relating to the guarantee fund under the Young plan, which concerns not the United States, but the Young plan signatories. France is seeking assurance, from Great Britain chiefly, that she will not be called upon to put up the guarantee fund if Germany should avail herself of a Young plan moratorium following the Hoover moratorium. Britain has failed so far to give the assurance demanded by France.

Shortly after 8 o'clock Mr. Castle emerged from the executive office and read the French communique, on which he said the administration would stand, making no statement of its own. He said he is optimistic of an agreement tomorrow.

Postpones His Holiday.

Mr. Hoover then returned to the White House for dinner, postponing his departure for the Rapidan camp until tomorrow, and the chauffeurs began unpacking the limousines and carrying back to the kitchen the boxes of picnic supper that were to have been served en route.

Negotiation by trans-oceanic telephone is the latest development of American shirt sleeve diplomacy. Premier Laval in Paris makes a proposition to Mr. Mellon. Mr. Mellon says he does not know how that would strike Mr. Hoover. He steps to the telephone and rings up the White House and talks to the President. In five minutes he is back, saying the President will accept the proposition if the French will do thus and so.

In the two weeks since the President proclaimed his moratorium proposal he has spent about two hours a day talking on the telephone to Europe. The White House telephone bill has shot skyward with a bound.

One reason for the great amount of telephoning back and forth is that Mr. Hoover has preferred to handle the negotiations himself. At no time has he clothed Mr. Mellon with plenipotentiary powers to negotiate. Mr. Mellon can suggest and can transmit suggestions, but he cannot speak authoritatively for his government. He must refer every question to Mr. Hoover.

Sends Stimson to Europe.

So noticeable has been the disposition of the President to handle this matter himself that there has been gossip to the effect that he sent Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson to Europe to get out of the way an adviser whose mind does not work so rapidly as does Mr. Hoover's, and who, therefore, is somewhat of a drag in rapid fire negotiations.

Mr. Stimson had announced during the first week of June that he would spend the summer touring European capitals, but when the President made his moratorium proposal the secretary said he didn't know whether he would be able to get away at the time planned. Mr. Hoover, however, told Mr. Stimson he could be of greater service in Europe and the secretary sailed only two days later than he originally had planned.

RECOVER BODY OF BOY BATHER.

DR. BUNDESEN LISTS DON'TS TO PREVENT FOURTH ACCIDENTS

In an effort to lessen the annual total of accidents and deaths due to Fourth of July celebrations, Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, commissioner of health, yesterday issued a list of "Don'ts" to the prospective celebrators. His advice was:

One. Don't give your children dangerous explosives and fireworks.

Two. Don't bootleg fireworks yourself and don't patronize any one who does.

Three. Don't allow children to overeat things bought from the roadside and picnic refreshment stands. The same holds true of drinks.

Four. Don't sacrifice your child's future health and happiness for the present moment's transitory pleasure.

Five. Don't seek the crowded places. Small family groups are safer.

Six. Don't drive recklessely; auto accidents take more lives on the Fourth of July than fireworks.

Seven. Don't neglect the usual safeguards in respect to swimming and bathing. Deaths by drownings rank higher than those of fireworks and automobiles.

Eight. Don't let babies get hold of any kind of fireworks. Babies have been fatally poisoned by eating them.

Nine. Don't set the example of lawbreaking before your children by driving outside the city and buying and bringing in contraband fireworks.

Ten. Don't mistake noise for patriotism.

If you must have noise, Dr. Bundesen counsels further, make it with nonexplosives. If some one is injured through accident get immediate first aid and see that the treatment includes the use of tetanus anti-toxin to prevent lockjaw.

CHICAGO HAILS FOURTH TODAY IN PATRIOT SPIRIT

3½ Millions to Join in Celebration.

o'clock this morning, with historical and comic floats; the veterans of three wars are to participate, and the Great Lakes Naval Training station band will head the procession. Athletic events, displays by business concerns and fireworks during the evening will follow at Dyche stadium.

Winnetka's parade, to be held at the same hour as Evanston's, will inaugurate a program of band concerts, community singing and athletic events. In the evening there will be dancing in the streets.

In Kenilworth a parade for the children will take place in the afternoon, followed by an athletic carnival at the beach. Wilmette has arranged a parade at 10 o'clock this morning, with sports to be features in the afternoon.

No Mail Deliveries Today.

No mail deliveries by letter carriers will be made today, Postmaster Arthur C. Lueder announced yesterday, and the main branch of the postoffice and all its substations will remain closed all day. One collection will be made from all street letter boxes, due to arrive at the main postoffice at 9 o'clock tonight.

While schools, banks, and most business houses will be closed all day today, the Field museum, the Shedd aquarium and other civic attractions will remain open to accommodate the thousands of holiday visitors spending the Fourth in the city. Admission to both of these institutions will be free today both to juveniles and adults. The aquarium will admit sightseers between 10 and 5, and the Field museum between 9 and 6 o'clock.

George G. Meade post of the G. A. R. will be host this afternoon between 2 and 5 o'clock at a reception in honor of J. H. Campbell, commander of the state organization and a past commander of Meade post, in the G. A. R. hall at 6236 Princeton avenue. There are only seven surviving members in the post, which once numbered 773 men. Other civil war veterans have received invitations to join in the function.

Expect Many at Parks.

Park and beach playgrounds in the city are ready to welcome the biggest outpouring of the year, while dining and dancing places await Chicagoans intent upon a glorious Fourth.

Autoists heading into central and northern Michigan along the Dunes Relief highway will find that the extensive construction work on the road between Michigan City and New Buffalo has been completed, and the detour, which would have interfered considerably with heavy holiday traffic, abandoned.

YANKEES INVADE WET CANADA FOR GLORIOUS FOURTH

Hawks Celebrates by Breaking a Record.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MONTREAL, Que., July 3.—Led by two prominent citizens, the annual American invasion of wet Canada for the Fourth of July was well under way tonight. Capt. Frank Hawks, breaker of airplane speed records, swept into the city this morning in his plane, breaking the speed record from Quebec City to Montreal, flying the 134 miles in 55 minutes.

FRANK HAWKS.

To start his holiday week-end right, Capt. Hawks broke a few other Canadian records. In addition to the flight from Quebec to Montreal he sped between Montreal and Toronto, Toronto and Ottawa, and Ottawa and Montreal at a speed faster than man has ever traveled. He returned to Montreal this evening. He plans to stay in this vicinity until Tuesday and admitted a new ambition.

"I'm going to catch the biggest fish in Canada," he said when asked what he was going to do next.

Cobb, also out for big fish, took a poke at the American dry law, declaring it was doomed to failure.

Cobb also took a crack at the recently raised Canadian tariff on magazines, declaring it would act as a boomerang to Canada and increase unemployment. He blamed the United States for raising its tariff as a reprisal to the action of other countries.

Montreal tonight was planning to handle thousands of American tourists over the week-end. All the liquor stores were stacked up with extra supplies prepared for a record day's trade tomorrow.

WHEN JUSTICE MEETS JUSTICE PEACE PREVAILS

Such was the case yesterday when Justice Charles Glass of Highwood appeared before Justice Edwin Burgess in Lake Forest, to answer a complaint that he drove 55 miles an hour in Western avenue, Lake Forest. Justice Glass was timed by Motorcycle Policeman Alfred Lindenmeyer.

Justice Glass told Justice Burgess that he was hurrying back to Highwood to be in time to hear some traffic cases. He declared the road was open, that he passed no other cars, and had complete control of his machine. Moreover, pleaded Justice Glass, it was his first offense. As a peroration, Justice Glass said he was lenient with traffic violators who appeared in his court. Justice Burgess reprimanded Justice Glass and then dismissed the charges. Then Justice Glass shook hands with Justice Burgess and also with Policeman Lindenmeyer and everthing was over.

Club Superintendent, Hurt in Quarrel, Dies

Injuries allegedly incurred on March 1 in a quarrel with two discharged employés caused the death yesterday of Frederick W. Linders, 57 years old, former superintendent of grounds of the Biltmore Country club, Barrington, Ill. The former employés appeared on the club grounds the day after their dismissal, it was charged, and struck Linders with a gallon water bottle. Charges were filed by both parties, but were later dropped.

Bloomington, Ind., July 3.—(AP)—Earl Lane, 21, of near here, was instantly killed today when a tire on his automobile blew out, causing the machine to overturn.

Among the first visitors at the city morgue was Miss Ruth Epsom, also of near Bloomington, an Indiana university student, who revealed she had been secretly wedded to Lane two weeks ago.

William Simpson Marks 50 Years with Santa Fe

William H. Simpson, assistant general passenger agent of the Santa Fe railroad, yesterday celebrated the fiftieth year in the service of the company. He started work as a clerk at Topeka, Kas., in 181, but since 1895 has been stationed in Chicago. At present he is in charge of the advertising department of the railroad.

CITY HALL OPENS COURT CAMPAIGN ON POOR HOUSING

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Bad housing conditions in Chicago are receiving fresh attention in various quarters of the city hall. The ancient evil touches several departments, such as health, fire prevention and building, but a new coördination is to be attempted on orders of Mayor Cermak, and a new survey is under way in the building department.

JUDGE O'CONNELL.

Coöperation is also observable in the courts, where the cases of condemned and unsafe buildings are called against property owners. Municipal Judge John F. O'Connell yesterday morning had ten cases in his court where owners had been compelled to comply with health and building ordinances. Thirty more cases are coming up for hearing on July 9.

Clean Up For World's Fair.

"I believe this is a good opportunity to clean up for the World's Fair year," said the judge. "It has been brought to my attention that there are 2,500 buildings in Chicago which are in a dilapidated condition, a menace to safety, fire hazards and eyesores. We must find a way to repair these or tear them down. Incidentally this would provide work for a lot of men. The city will have the full cooperation of this court, but in some cases the litigation must go before the Circuit or Superior court before action can be taken."

Mayor Cermak asked that an assistant corporation counsel be assigned to facilitate these cases in the future.

The last survey in the building department showed a list of 4,500 buildings that were above the 50 per cent mark in dilapidation, many of them 70 and 80 per cent toward ruin. More than one thousand of these were wrecked last year.

Hands Tied in Many Cases.

"The chief trouble," said M. S. Brennan, acting chief inspector, "is that many of the buildings are in foreclosure, and no responsible party can be found to proceed against. Some are in litigation, others are held by banks, and some of the banks are closed. Our hands are tied in many cases."

The property at 402 Tremont street is a good illustration of these difficulties. The owner's name is recorded as J. Flannigan, but the building department cannot find him. The building has collapsed on its foundation and is propped against a neighbor's house. Negro squatters occupied it until driven out by the police. After a year of search no one seems responsible for the place and it is to be torn down by court order next week. One man of the name of J. Flannigan indignantly denied ownership.

"If any one has gratuitously cast this property in my lap, I am unaware of the fact," he wrote. "Under the present situation of taxes in Chicago I would not take it as a gift."

Properties at 2525 West Harrison street and at 1020 South Lincoln street are to be wrecked next week, after similar delays.

Need Wholesale Wrecking.

The worst sections in the city are within a mile or so of the loop in the old districts, north of Chicago avenue and on the west side of the river, from Van Buren street south. There is room for some wholesale wrecking here and the building of new homes for the lower wage scale earners. The district "back of the yards" and the south and west side Negro sections also give opportunity for vast improvement. Within a mile or two of the loop people are living in rooms so dark that one cannot read in them. It was shown in one survey that there are 1,616 such rooms.

A program of wrecking, coupled with one of construction, was talked about a year ago, but it has not materialized. The Rosenwald low rental apartments have demonstrated that private capital can enter this field safely.

FIRST FIREWORKS FATALITY CAUSED BY EXPLOSION

Bristol, Conn., July 3.—(AP)—The first fireworks fatality of the season in the east occurred today when Morris L. Tiffany Jr., 26, received fatal injuries when a toy cannon exploded prematurely.

Tiffany, son of the cashier of the Bristol American Bank and Trust company, had just loaded the toy for a test when the explosion occurred. The blast tore off both hands and drove the paper wad deep into his abdomen. He died shortly after reaching Bristol hospital.

Stockton, N. J., July 3.—[Special.]—Albert Newcombe, 8, lost his left hand and his 10 year old sister and another playmate were bruised about the bodies tonight in the explosion of some firecrackers which they had stuffed into a bottle in the back yard of the Newcombe home. Albert's condition is serious.

Torpedo Explodes; Boy Loses Eye.

Taylorville, Ill., July 3.—[Special.]—The first Fourth of July accident here resulted in the loss of an eye to Cale Allen, 15, today when a torpedo was exploded near his head by an autoist.

Judge Denies New Trial on $16,000 Heart Balm Award

Judge Marcus Kavanagh yesterday overruled the motion for a new trial of the suit against William H. Evans, owner of the Evans Flexible Reamer company, in which Miss Lillian McQuillan, 1922 North Central Park avenue, was awarded $16,000 for breach of promise. She charged that she kept company with Evans, a married man, for nearly ten years.

WIN SUPPORT

MRS. OLGA PETERS (PIOTROWSKI) AND SON.

Circuit Judge Daniel P. Trude, yesterday ordered Frank Peters, to pay Mrs. Olga Peters, 14 West Chestnut street, $2.00 a week for the support of their son, William Wesley Peters, 1 year old, who was born six months after Mr. and Mrs. Peters were divorced.

Mrs. Peters, in her petition to modify her husband's divorce decree and provide for support for the boy, charged that her husband divorced her in December, 1923, with her consent. The father raised a question as to the paternity of the child in the support proceedings.

Peters' family had opposed their marriage in 1924, she charged, and offered him $30,000 if he would divorce her. He promised that he would remarry her after collecting the money if she agreed to a divorce on grounds of cruelty, but failed to carry out his end of the bargain, she charged.

SUBURB SEEKS SUNKEN ROAD IN BUSINESS AREA

Glencoe Proposes Speedway Plan.

BY HAL FOUST.

The Glencoe board of trustees is petitioning the Cook county board to construct a depressed pavement with continuous grade separation through the business district of the village. It is a detail of a plan for the improvement of Railroad avenue, paralleling the Chicago and North Western tracks, as a fast traffic route between the north shore suburbs and Chicago.

The depression would begin at Hawthorne avenue and extend to Dennis lane, a distance of about half a mile, carrying through traffic through the district without inconvenience or hazard to pedestrians and local traffic. A service drive and sidewalks at normal level would accommodate shoppers, pedestrians, parking and local traffic. Cross streets would be on viaducts over the speedway.

Approved by Town Groups.

The plan was approved by the village trustees after it had been agreed upon by the Glencoe plan commission, the Glencoe park district, the Glencoe library board and the Glencoe school board. The Cook county commissioners have submitted the proposal to the county highway department for its recommendation.

Railroad avenue is now a four lane highway from McCormick road, in Evanston, to the southern limits of Glencoe with the exception of a gap in Winnetka and another in Wilmette, which will probably be paved this year. In Winnetka the contract has been let to close the gap, from Tower road to Elm street, a little over a mile. The right of way is being acquired to widen and pave Railroad avenue from McCormick road southeast to Ridge avenue.

Connect with Wide Routes.

The proposed depressed section in Glencoe would be connected by new four lane pavement at the north to the Green Bay road and at the south to the existing forty foot pavement in Hubbard Woods. With other improvements in prospect, this would form a fast route from the suburbs to Chicago, relieving congestion on the narrow and winding Sheridan road where high priced residential property precludes any considerable improvement in through traffic facilities.

Highway engineers estimated that the cost of the improvement would approximate $1,000,000. This cost, it was said, might postpone the county's construction of the depressed section until such time as the Chicago and North Western railroad is ready to depress its tracks through the north shore suburbs. The pavement and tracks could be depressed at the same time cheaper than they could be depressed separately.

ASK HOOVER FOR SPECIAL SESSION ON JOB RELIEF

A group of Chicagoans prominent in educational and social service work yesterday made public a petition which they, with 1,200 other persons throughout the country, have addressed to President Hoover, urging him to call a special session of congress to deal with unemployed relief.

The document suggests three programs: appropriation by congress of at least $3,000,000,000 for public works and extensions of credit for municipal housing projects; appropriation of at least $250,000,000 to match similar amounts spent by cities or states for unemployment relief; and appropriation of at least $250,000,000 for subvention of state unemployment insurance systems.

The Chicago signers included the Rev. Frederic Siedenberg, dean of the school of sociology at Loyola university, Profs. H. A. Millis, Garfield V. Cox, Robert Morse Lovett, and Harold G. Shields of the University of Chicago, Harriet E. Vittum of the Northwestern university settlement and Dr. Paul Silbur, president of the Hebrew Theological institute.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 3.—[Special.]—Harry L. Reichenbach, 49, the greatest press agent of them all, died here today. Master of the psychological pulse of public interest, versatile, imaginative, and an international wit, the dean of old time stunt men was as different from the present day space grabber as black is from white.

HARRY REICHENBACH.

That is why he rates an obituary. When a press agent dies he rightly belongs in his alphabetical place among the paid death notices. Reichenbach was more than a press agent. He gave the editor a story on days when he needed a story. He never asked for a break. He made his own breaks.

Lives in Hotel Rooms.

The days of lions in hotel bedrooms, elephants swimming to Coney Island, milk baths, and Broadway oil wells vanished this morning in an east side hospital when Harry Reichenbach died of an internal disease which had been weakening his health for eight months. Reichenbach lived his life in the day after tomorrow. He had to in order to keep feeding the linotype machines.

It was Harry who planted a mangy lion in the Hotel Majestic as the roommate of one Mr. T. R. Zann. He was working for "Tarzan of the Apes." Then there was the elephant that swam ashore at Coney Island one summer evening. "Toto" was Mr. Reichenbach's elephant.

For almost twenty years his career as a publicity man was spectacular. David Belasco, John Cort, the Schuberts, Klaw & Erlanger and later the motion picture giants, bid furiously for his services. He often received a salary of $2,000 a week.

"Bombards" German Lines.

They pay "publicity engineers" these days to keep news out of the papers, but Reichenbach made news. During the world war he served as a major in charge of propaganda on the western front. He bombarded the enemy lines with 45,000,000 pieces of allied propaganda. Italy called him in and he served Lord Northcliffe in England.

"I got the Italians worked up to such a point," Reichenbach said some years ago, "that they would fall down and worship President Wilson's picture every morning."

Reichenbach, born at Frostburg, Md., one of a family of eight children, generally was regarded as the founder of modern motion picture publicity from the early days. Sam Goldwyn wrote checks and Reichenbach wrote publicity out of the same ink pot. He "discovered" Douglas Fairbanks, Marguerite Clarke and Clara Kimball Young, and "made" Barbara Lamarr and Francis X. Bushman. He gave Rudolph Valentino his first job, kept Gloria Swanson on page one in competition with 500 Poles lost in a coal mine.

It was, however, Reichenbach's genius for "planted" stunts that earned him his greatest glory and, occasionally condemnation.

Call In Reichenbach.

The publicizing of "September Morn" was one of Reichenbach's first jobs. The picture of the innocent though nude little girl standing ankle deep in a pool of water was not selling very well and the then young press agent was called in by the publishers. Reichenbach at once arranged to have a large copy of the print displayed in a Fifth avenue show window. Then he hired a dozen urchins to stand outside and point and smirk at the nude girl. His third step was to telephone Anthony Comstock, the reformer, and complain of the picture's salaciousness as evidenced by its effect on the youth of the city. Comstock came storming into the Fifth avenue shop and after that "September Morn" adorned millions of walls.

Funeral services for Mr. Reichenbach will be held at Temple Emanu-El Monday morning. All Broadway will be there.

$1,000,000 PRIZES IN "PROSPERITY DRIVE" DELAYED

Those among Chicago's population of 3,376,000, who have waited for the awarding of prizes on July 4 in the "$1,000,000 Prosperity Drive" conducted in the last city hall administration, are to be disappointed today. The distribution of prizes has been postponed.

Further information could not be obtained. Louis E. Golan, chairman of the drive, was out of the city yesterday, and, according to his office associates, is not expected back until Tuesday. Others connected with the old city hall admitted their interest in the defiated scheme has lagged, and that they have no knowledge of its proposed fate.

At the inception of the drive prizes ranging from $100,000 to $50, including one for $50,000 and one for $25,000, were announced. There were to be 16,500 of the $50 class. According to reports less than $25,000 worth of tickets were distributed through retail store purchases instead of $1,000,000 worth.

DIES SUDDENLY IN HOME.

Figures Show Decrease in Last 6 Months.

Chicago street traffic was stalled approximately 1,900 hours, or the equivalent of nearly 80 days, during the first half of 1931 by bridges, swung open in most cases to accommodate sandboats, yachts, derricks, pile drivers, and tugs.

The bridge statistics for the six months from Jan. 1 to June 30 were made public yesterday at the office of the city harbor master. They showed that Chicago's 53 bridges were opened 32,879 times during the six months period. As 3.5 minutes is the average time each span remains open, this meant that pedestrians and vehicles waited about 1,900 hours for the benefit of the river traffic.

A Decrease of 28 Per Cent.

There was an indicated decrease of 28 per cent in the number of bridge openings during the first half of 1931 as compared to 1930, when the total openings for the year were 91,700. The 1930 openings had been 28 per cent under those for 1929, totaling 122,722. One important factor credited by officials for the reduction has been enforcement of the ordinance to put into effect a year ago, extending the rush hour traffic periods when the bridges must remain closed.

Despite the reduction, however, the fact that minor craft continued to be heavy contributors to the bridge nuisance lent strength to the theory that their operators wield sufficient political influence to keep themselves free from interference.

Higher ups in the war department at Washington, which has the ultimate say so about bridge closed hours in Chicago, recently denied that they are influenced except by "Chicago business interests" as represented at the hearing a year ago on the question of bridge openings. They insist, nevertheless, failed to explain to the satisfaction of merchants, delivery concerns, loop workers and others who lose time and money whenever a bridge opens, why a lumber schooner or a private yacht is permitted to open bridges to the detriment of the thousands of persons using the streets and sidewalks.

207 Times for Sandmaster.

Out of the 552 times the Michigan avenue bridge opened prior to June 30 of this year, 207 were to allow passage for the Sandmaster, a scow boat owned by the Construction Materials company. The bridge opened 42 times for yachts, 34 times for derricks, 21 times for pile drivers, and 10 times for dredges.

The Sandmaster forced the Michigan avenue span open an average of fifteen times a week between Jan. 1 and April 15. On each trip it also opened each of the other bridges over the main branch of the river.

List Number of Openings.

The total number of openings of the downtown bridges during the first six months of the year were as follows: Michigan avenue, 552; Wabash avenue, 692; State street, 795; Dearborn street, 602; Wells street, 595; Clark street, 545; Franklin street, 595; Lake street, 843; Randolph street, 595; Washington boulevard, 765; Madison street, 803; Monroe street, 839; Adams street, 801; Jackson boulevard, 795; Van Buren street, 928; La Salle street, 562.

During a recent inquiry by Commissioner of Public Works Sprague with a view to slashing expenditures, it was shown that the city is paying nearly a million dollars a year for bridge tending service. The city employs 388 bridge tenders at salaries ranging from $2,160 to $2,400. The budget appropriations for this service rose from $302,820 for 1930 to $[illegible] for this year.

FINDS ELECTRIC TOASTER USED IN FIRE PLOT

An unusual method of incendiarism was discovered by Chief James Cowhey of the 4th fire battalion early this morning, he said, after an explosion and fire had caused damage estimated at $5,000 in Mirror hall, a lodge headquarters, at 1136 North Western avenue.

After the flames had been extinguished Chief Cowhey said he had found an electric toaster concealed in a small attic above the second floor of the two story brick structure. From the toaster an electric cord ran to a light socket with a pullchain attachment. Tied to the chain, the chief said, was another cord which ran down to the front entrance of the building. On the end of this cord was a key.

Chief Cowhey said he believed the explosion had been caused when some one had jerked the key, turning on the toaster, which, he said, could have attained sufficient heat to explode inflammable liquid, traces of which were found in the attic. John Fennessey, 51 years old, 5109 Argyle street, night watchman at the hall, was held by the West North avenue police for questioning.

GARMENT PRICES IN STATE ST. EASY ON BUYER'S PURSE

Men's Wear Shows Large Drop from Last Year.

Relief to the buyer's pocketbook is contained in the prices now quoted by State street stores. Prices have reached new low levels.

This was the impression gathered in a survey of loop shops and department stores yesterday. Especially is it true of men's furnishings. Suits, hats, shoes, and all other articles of men's wearing apparel show substantial decreases in price.

How long these bargains will last is a question which the merchants were unable to answer, but it was their guess that a general stiffening in prices will be detected this fall. Manufacturers' surpluses and a desire to stimulate buying are at the bottom of the present low prices, some said. They added that advantageous purchases for the wholesalers are about over and that the process of transferring these bargains to retail prices for the customers' benefit cannot last long.

Silk Goods Much Cheaper.

Wholesale silk prices are down as much as 33 per cent and the effect has been felt in the retail prices of neckwear, underwear, and hosiery. One grade of socks which sold last year for $1.50 is now selling for 40 cents. Neckties which were priced at $3 last year can be had for $1.15 and a $2.50 grade is now selling for 95 cents. Some of these reductions are the result of seasonal sales, but the general decline in silk prices is seen in all articles made of silk.

Shirts and shorts, the popular underwear for men, are far below last year's prices. Shorts that sold last year for $1 are now priced at 65 cents and the 75 cent grade is now sold for half a dollar.

Fall overcoats, which are beginning to appear on the sales racks, have undergone price reductions. Some coats which were sold last year for $50 can be had for $30 less now and a garment sold for $100 last fall now costs $75.

Buying increased appreciably in May and June, according to the merchants who reported that the customers, instead of buying cheaper grades of clothing, are paying the prices they have always paid but are demanding and receiving more value for their dollars.

SHERIFF MUST EXPLAIN BEFORE HIS BILL IS PAID

Until the county commissioners find out what Sheriff Meyering did with the 400 stars which he purchased recently, they won't pay bill of $971 which was presented for them, they ruled yesterday.

James C. Russell, commissioner of public service, told the board that the sheriff sent him a requisition for the stars, which Russell returned with the notation, "Why?"

Members of the board, recalling that the sheriff has recently revived the custom of issuing courtesy cards, once discontinued because several of the cards were found in the possession of racketeers, asked if he was also issuing courtesy, or "I-gotta drag" stars.

The new stars were purchased because there were too many of the old ones in circulation," was the explanation given by Frank Wright, assistant sheriff. Action on the bill was deferred by the commissioners until Sheriff Meyering returns from the Stribling-Schmeling fight at Cleveland.

Thom, 39 years old, who on Thursday appeared at her husband's florist shop, 1935 Irving Park boulevard, waving a riding crop in the direction of Mrs. Frieda Hermann, manager, was found guilty of disorderly conduct and fined under a $500 peace bond yesterday by Judge Leon Edelman in Town Hall court. Judge Edelman was told that a divorce suit is pending between the Thoms.

Cattle Feed Still Burns After 48 Hours of Water

Forty-eight hours after firemen were summoned a pile of cattle feed sixty feet long and 10 feet high continued to smoulder yesterday beside the warehouse of the Archer Daniels Midland company on the Chicago river at 667 Blackhawk street. The firemen Graeme Stewart is reinforcing an engine company headed by Chief Thomas Murray of the Third battalion in pouring water on the feed.

EDITOR WEDS MOVIE STAR

MR. AND MRS. BOLTON MALLORY.

Newtown, Conn., July 3.—[Special.]—Nancy Carroll, red headed, diminutive movie star, a month after she sued her first husband, Jack Kirkland, for a divorce in Mexico, and only a week after she got her decree, became the wife today of Bolton Mallory, a magazine editor whom she met on a Havana cruise last January while her husband remained at home in Hollywood with their baby daughter.

Nancy and Mallory were married with civil rites in this little Connecticut town, to which they drove from New York in Mallory's automobile. Immediately after the ceremony they started on a honeymoon motor trip to Canada.

Third Marriage for Mallory.

Mallory, 33, native of Saginaw, Mich., managing editor of Life, the humorous weekly, former English professor at Princeton university and ex-advertising man, admitted he had been married twice before.

Miss Carroll said her name was Ann Lahiff. She made no mention of her movie fame. She wore a brown and white sports ensemble, with two tone tan sports shoes, and carried a huge bouquet of orchids. Her flaming red hair was partly covered by a smart brown toque.

She was attended by her sister, Terry Carroll, who played with Nancy in a small time vaudeville act, known as the Carroll Sisters, before Nancy became a Broadway chorus girl and later a picture star.

Ex-Husband "Interested."

"I'm very much interested," was Kirkland's comment when he learned of his ex-wife's marriage in New York tonight. "I wish her all happiness, and I congratulate him. But I must say it did not take long."

Nancy sued Kirkland for divorce in Nogales, Mex., on June 3. That was their seventh wedding anniversary. Neither she nor her former husband went to Mexico. An attorney for the movie star went there and attended to all the legal work, while both principals remained in New York.

Kirkland was charged with incompatibility. He did not contest the suit. She got her decree by mail last week, but Kirkland said tonight that he had not been advised that the divorce had been granted.

By the terms of a private agreement, Nancy and Kirkland will share custody of their five year old daughter, Patricia. The child is now in New York with Nancy's mother.

INDICT MOTHER FOR TWO POISON PICNIC DEATHS

Lebanon, Ind., July 3.—[Special.]—The poison deaths of her two daughters were charged to Mrs. Carrie Barrett Simmons of Greenfield today in indictments returned by the Boone county grand jury accusing her of murder.

The girls—Elisabeth, 13 years old, and Anna Jean, 19—died in convulsions at a picnic after they had eaten chicken sandwiches, prepared by their mother, which had been treated with strychnine. Three other persons at the family reunion in Memorial park here were made ill by the food, one almost dying.

Held in the county jail, Mrs. Simmons was not called by the grand jury, nor was she present when the indictments were returned. Word was carried to her by Sheriff Wilbur Small and she received it calmly. "When will I go to trial?" were her only words. She was told that County Attorney Ben M. Scifres will confer with her lawyers within a few days and that indications were that the trial would not start until September.

MRS. CARRIE SIMMONS.

EXAMINE BODY OF HUSBAND IN HUNT FOR POISON

A post-mortem examination of the body of Frank Smidl, 62 years old, was made yesterday by Dr. Clarence F. Muehlberger, coroner's chemist. The internal organs will be tested for evidences of poisoning, it was announced.

The examination, it was said, disclosed that Smidl had not died of a cerebral hemorrhage, the cause first given. A son, Frank Smidl Jr., 29 years old, 2131 South 59th court, Cicero, declared that his father had told him he believed he was being poisoned. The son obtained a court order from Criminal Court Judge John Prystalski stopping the funeral.

FINAL PAYMENT ON WABASH JOB SET AT $299,741

A final payment of $299,741 to the Ketler-Elliott company on its contract for the construction of the north approach to the Wabash avenue bridge was recommended to the city council yesterday by a subcommittee. The action was taken on the recommendation of Col. A. A. Sprague, commissioner of public works.

The contract price for the viaduct was $529,920. Richard W. Wolfe, former public works commissioner, ordered extras without authority from the city council, which resulted in the company submitting bills totaling $1,031,091. The company has been paid $508,780, and if the subcommittee's recommendation is accepted will receive $299,741 additional.

The balance of $222,570 claimed by the company is part of the bill submitted for 37,095 cubic feet of excavation below a depth of 75 feet. The contract price was $10 a cubic foot. The subcommittee recognized $4 a cubic foot as a fair price for this work, and voted to withhold payment of the additional $6 a cubic foot, amounting to $222,570.

In the bidding on the viaduct work the E. J. Albrecht company was low with a price of $514,120, but Wolfe let the contract to the Ketler-Elliott company for $529,930. The Albrecht company set a price of $3 a cubic foot on Wolfe's estimate of 2,200 cubic feet of caisson excavation below 75. The Ketler-Elliott price for the same work was $10 a cubic foot.

EFFICIENCY QUIZ BECOMES A POSER FOR POLICEMAN

Policemen and firemen yesterday were confronted with a task that brought bewilderment to many. They had before them the questionnaires sent out by J. L. Jacobs, county efficiency engineer, who is classifying all city positions for Mayor Cermak and his advisory commission.

One of the first problems was the request to list the length of service in the various bureaus in the departments. Only five lines has been set aside for the answer, and with transfers frequent, especially in the police department, it is scarcely space enough for the record of fifteen or twenty years' service.

Another stickler was the requirement to list the total amount of overtime worked during 1930. For a fireman that might be easy, but for the policemen who are accustomed to appear several hours in court in addition to the regular round of eight hours duty, the question contained a severe memory test. Both policemen and firemen also are asked to describe an "average" day's work.

GOVERNOR SIGNS BILL REMAPPING CONGRESS AREAS

Law Prohibiting Machine Guns Approved.

Springfield, Ill., July 3.—[Special.]—Gov. Louis L. Emmerson today signed the congressional reapportionment bill, which gives to the Chicago metropolitan area four additional districts. It becomes effective immediately and opens the way for candidates to set up their machinery in the new districts.

Under the provisions of the measure, the state is divided into twenty-seven districts, of which fourteen are in a metropolitan district consisting of Cook, Will, Du Page, and Lake counties, and the other thirteen downstate. The bill was urged by the Republicans of the house and senate and its passage was aided by Gov. Emmerson. The executive made no statement in connection with the signing of the measure, which makes unnecessary the election of congressmen-at-large.

The governor also signed Senator Adelbert Roberts' bill, which prohibits the sale, possession, and transportation of machine guns in Illinois. The measure is one of a group which passed the legislature aimed at gangsters. It prohibits merchants from keeping in stock machine guns or parts thereof except for delivery to persons who have a signed, written permit for their purchase. Army, navy, and National Guardsmen and peace officers of the state are exempt from provisions of the bill.

Among the measures approved was one increasing fees of buses on the basis of weight, and the measure by Representative Walker, appropriating $10,500,000 annually to the state school distributive fund. Representative John Bolton's bill, aimed to halt the sale of habit forming drugs, was given approval, as was Senator Martin Carlson's bill, providing that gasoline distributors shall file a $5,000 bond with the state department of finance. The bill, it was said during the session, was aimed to halt the gasoline bootlegger.

GIRL DIES, 2 HURT IN COLLISION ON WAY TO FUNERAL

Miss Julia McKenna, 25 years old, a nurse, was killed and her fiancé, Policeman Alphonse Arnold of Evanston, and his brother, Maurice Arnold, were injured when the automobile in which they were riding to a funeral skidded on wet pavement and crashed into an Irving Park boulevard street car yesterday near the north branch of the river at Rockwell street. The condition of the men is critical.

The three were on their way to the funeral of Daniel Higgins in Berwyn, a brother-in-law of the Arnolds. Policeman Arnold, who was driving, applied the brakes as they approached the street car. The car skidded, collided head on with the street car, and overturned. The brothers are in the Martha Washington hospital.

Soon to Be Bride.

Miss McKenna was graduated last year from the St. Francis hospital and lived at the nurses' registry home, 826 Washington street, Evanston. She and Policeman Arnold were to have been married in a month. Arnold, who lives at 722 Clark street, Evanston, joined the Evanston police force June 6, 1929.

The death of Miss McKenna and six others raised the 1931 Cook county motor toll to 571. The other victims:

William Warner, 58 years old, 327 West Marion street, Joliet. Died in the Oak Forest infirmary of injuries received a week ago in an auto crash at 183d street and Cicero avenue.

Mrs. Stella Peltier, 30 years old, 4430 Nevada street. Killed when the roadster in which she was riding with her husband, Edwin C. Peltier, collided head on with a truck driven by Howard Ross of Jefferson, Ia., on North avenue near the Glen Ellyn road. Mr. Peltier was critically injured.

Mrs. Dorothy Thompson, 73 years old, 7725 Lowe avenue. Fatally injured when she was struck by an automobile at South Park avenue and 26th street. Felix Bolt, 43 years old, 7020 Clyde avenue, driver of the automobile, was held.

Eugene Ogannis, 14 years old, 1451 West Ohio street. Fatally injured when he was struck by an automobile while riding a bicycle in front of his home. Joseph Lossman, 17 years old, 450 North Paulina street, driver of the car, was held.

Edgar Smith, colored, 38 years old, 4846 South Michigan avenue. Fatally injured when the automobile in which he was riding was struck by a 59th street car at Ashland avenue.

Anna May Petitbone, colored, 20 years old, 218 East 59th street. Killed with Smith.

Charles H. Rockel, 17 years old, of Slatington, Pa., was fatally injured when the motorcycle on which he was riding collided with an automobile driven by D. P. Drew of Aurora on route 22 near Aurora. Rockel was employed by Frank Ehrhardt, a farmer living a mile north of Naperville. He had left his home to beat his way westward to learn to ride mustangs and bulldog steers as a preliminary to joining rodeo.

IF YOUR STOCK FLYER LOST YOU CAN'T CUT TAX

U. S. Allows Deductions to Professionals Only.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 3.—[Special.]—The dabbler in speculation who took a flyer in the stock market and took a licking as the result of it will get no allowance for his "net loss" under Section 117 of the 1928 revenue act, according to the latest statement of the rules and regulations division of the internal revenue bureau. In order to secure such a "net loss" allowance the taxpayer must actually be engaged in market trading as a business, the statement declares.

The reason for the issuance of the statement, it was explained today, is that as an unpleasant sequel to the halcyon days of paper profits and the 1929 crash which wiped them out, numerous claims have been presented to the income tax authorities.

Only Applies to Business.

"The term 'net loss,'" the bureau instructs its collectors of internal revenue, internal revenue agents, and others concerned, "as used in Section 117 of the revenue act of 1928, applies to a net loss during the taxable year in a trade or business regularly carried on by the tax payer. Therefore, in order to be entitled to claim an allowance for a 'net loss' the taxpayer must have suffered an actual net loss in a trade or business during the taxable year. Whether or not a taxpayer's activities, and particularly his activities involving stock market transactions, constitutes 'a trade or business' as that terms is contemplated by the statutory provisions is purely a question of fact in each case and no general rule can be laid down which would be determinative of this issue in all cases in which the question arises."

There follows a list and discussion of typical cases.

Cites from Appeal Case.

The case of Ignaz Schwinn vs. the commissioner of internal revenue found the board of tax appeals enunciating "certain fundamental principles." In that case it is recalled that the board stated as follows [omitting detailed citations]:

"[1] Losses from isolated transactions entered into for profit are separately considered from those incurred in trade or business; [2] when the expression 'trade or business' is used in the statute in connection with losses it would seem to refer to a regular occupation or calling of the taxpayer for the purpose of livelihood or profit; [3] this is one of the accepted definitions of the term 'business,' and is probably its most usual legal sense; [4] it has been recognized by the courts and by the bureau of internal revenue that a person can be engaged in more than one trade or business; [5] it is not necessary under the language of the act [1924] that the activities in question form the taxpayer's principal trade or business; it is sufficient that they may of themselves be regarded as an occupation or business; [6] it is recognized that a single, isolated activity or transaction is not sufficient to constitute a business or vocation."

Numerous other cases are reviewed. The board of tax appeals and the bureau, it was pointed out, have disagreed in several cases, among them that of a company executive receiving a salary of $25,300 a year. The board held that his investment activities were sufficient to constitute them a regular business. The internal revenue bureau thought them casual. Other border line cases are cited.

PACIFIC FLYERS WAIT REFUELING PLANE'S ARRIVAL

Seattle, Wash., July 3.—(AP)—The projected nonstop Seattle to Tokio flight of Reg L. Robbins and H. S. Jones will be delayed at least another day to await the arrival of their refueling plane at Fairbanks, Alaska. The two Texas aviators said today they hope to get away Sunday morning.

Weather Delays Frenchmen.

PARIS, July 3.—(AP)—An adverse weather report today deferred the Paris-Tokio flight of Joseph Lebrix and Martin Doret, noted French flyers. Indications were that they would be able to take off tomorrow.

Both Lebrix and Doret are fired by the example set by Wiley Post and Harold Gatty, round the world flyers, but Lebrix declared today the Tokio flight was for the purpose of breaking the world's straight line distance record and was not the initial hop of a globe circling tour.

DEAN WIGMORE HITS EVANSTON'S FEE ON BEACHES

In a letter to the parks committee of the Evanston city council yesterday John H. Wigmore, former dean of the law school of Northwestern university, asserted that Evanston would label itself a "city of Scrooges" if it enforced a recently passed ordinance placing a special tax on non-residents visiting its beaches.

Mr. Wigmore, who lives in Evanston at 207 Lake street, declared that visitors from Chicago are not disorderly, that there is plenty of room for them and that Evanstonians were unfair in attempting to make visitors pay $1 for each time they visit a beach in the suburb.

"We are encouraging Chicago to charge us for visiting the Art museum, the Field museum, the Chicago parks and other places of recreation and entertainment," he added. "A member of Evanston's 'finest' would almost be willing to resign before enforcing this Scrooge ordinance."

Train Kills Veteran Conductor at Gary

George W. Robinson, 9922 Avenue M, South Chicago, was killed yesterday by a switch engine in the yards of the E. J. & E. railroad at Gary. He had been a conductor on that line for 33 years. He is survived by a widow, Mrs. Barbara Robinson, and two daughters, Mrs. James D. O'Connor and Mrs. Floyd Graham.

Stricken in Wales

DANIEL PROTHEROE.

Dr. Daniel Protheroe, noted Chicago choral leader and composer, became seriously ill yesterday at Harlech, Wales, where he was conducting a Welsh music festival on the grounds of Harlech castle. Dr. Protheroe, a native of Wales, came to the United States in 1886 and was naturalized in 1891. He conducted singing societies in Scranton, Pa., and in Milwaukee before coming to Chicago. Since 1904 he has been director of the Central church choir. He has also conducted the Illinois Bell Telephone company choruses.

I. N. G. ARTILLERY TO TRAIN THIS YEAR AT SPARTA

Defeat of Rockford Range Is Reason.

Artillery units of the 33d division, Illinois National Guard, will be trained at Camp McCoy, Sparta, Wis., this summer, according to an announcement made yesterday by Maj. Gen. Roy D. Keehn, commander of the division. The training period for the three artillery regiments is in the first two weeks in August, coinciding with the annual encampment of other units of the division at Camp Grant, Rockford.

GEN. SCHWENGEL.

It became necessary to arrange for accommodation of the artillery at Sparta after the Illinois house of representatives had indicated, last February, that it did not favor the expenditure of $600,000 for an artillery range at Camp Grant. The disapproval was registered in a resolution asking Gov. Emmerson to allow the appropriation, made two years ago, to lapse on July 1. This was done and the money reverted to the general revenue fund of the state.

Brig. Gen. Frank Schwengel will command the units at Sparta, Maj. Gen. Keehn said. They are the 122d and 124th field artillery regiments of Chicago and the 123d heavy artillery, the personnel of which is scattered downstate. About 1,500 men will engage in the training.

Next year the artillery will join the division at Camp Grant, the ammunition allotment being sufficient for only one firing season each biennium, according to the commander. The Sparta range is on a 30,000 acre government reservation and has been used previously by the Minnesota, Wisconsin and Iowa National Guard units.

Frog Has 6 Legs, but They Didn't Help It Get Away

Pesotum, Ill., July 3.—[Special.]—A frog with six legs, which was caught by Guy Moody, east of town, Wednesday night, was on exhibition Friday at the George Shelton store. The two extra legs are on the left side.

FLYER HEROES GO YACHTING TO ESCAPE CROWDS

Gatty Returns Cravat Borrowed for World Trip.

New York, July 3.—[Special.]—The Winnie Mae and her round the world companions were reunited for a few minutes today and then they went different ways—the Winnie Mae to go on public exhibition out at Floyd Bennett Airport, and her flyers, Wiley Post and Harold Gatty, to do exactly the opposite by taking a week-end yacht cruise to get away from public gaze for a while.

Before noon the flyers drove out to Roosevelt field, inspected their ship and found her in fine condition despite her 15,000 miles in 8 days, 15 hours and 51 minutes. Then they flew her over to the Bennett field, where she will be on display until Sunday night.

Before leaving Roosevelt field Gatty returned the necktie he borrowed to wear around the world. Funny thing about that tie. A week ago last Tuesday, just as the Winnie Mae was about to leave for its flight, Gatty discovered he had forgotten his. He didn't want to appear in England and Germany and Russia and all those other places without one, so he borrowed one from Charles de Bever, a former parachute jumper, crippled by an accident, who is attached to Roosevelt field.

Week-end Yacht Guests.

From Bennett field the flyers drove back into Manhattan, and with Mrs. Post and Mrs. Gatty and F. C. Hall, the backer of their flight, left almost immediately for Stamford, Conn., to be the week-end guests of William H. Todd on board his yacht the St. Elmo.

Sailing, sleeping and sail fishing are the scheduled diversions of the week-end. Post isn't a fisherman, but Gatty is at home on anything that plies the water and he loves to fish.

Tomorrow noon the whole party will be guests of former Gov. Smith at an inn far out on Long Island, and of Carl Fisher at dinner at Montauk point tomorrow night, and the rest of the time they'll just rest. They will come back to Manhattan Sunday night and Monday morning they are to fly the Winnie Mae down to Washington for a reception and luncheon at the White House as the guests of President Hoover.

For nine solid hours—just how solid only a pair of exhausted aviators could realize—Post and Gatty slept at the Ritz-Carlton last night. That was more than half the sleep they got on their whole flight. They could have gone on sleeping for twelve hours more, willingly, but they rolled out at 9 o'clock this morning and dressed hastily to be ready for the members of the mayor's committee who were going out to Roosevelt field with them.

Preparations at Washington.

Washington, D. C., July 3.—[Special.]—Preliminaries for the capital's welcome to Wiley Post and Harold Gatty next Monday had grown to the point tonight where it was apparent they would receive one of the greatest testimonials ever paid in Washington to flying heroes of the last few years.

Three functions have been arranged. The first will lead the flyers to the White House, where, as guests of President and Mrs. Hoover, Post and Gatty, their wives, F. C. Hall, backer of the flight, and his daughter, Mrs. Winnie Mae Fain, will meet the leaders of the nation's official life.

Next a reception by the National Press club is to be held at 4 o'clock. The third function will be the testimonial dinner at night in the Willard hotel.

A complication may develop at the Press club reception. The entertainment committee has invited a representative of the President and several ambassadors to share the same platform with Broia E. Skvirsky, soviet representative at Washington.

SEALER GREIN FILES 8 SUITS AGAINST BAKERS

Suits were filed yesterday by City Sealer Grein against eight bakers, either for giving short weight or for having no labels on bread, and against seven icemen for skimping in ice poundage in sales to customers.

POLICE IN NAVY UNIFORMS TRAP LIQUOR SELLERS

Adams Aroused; Orders an Investigation.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 3.—[Special.]—Secretary of the Navy Adams today ordered that an investigation be made immediately into reports that Philadelphia policemen have been using uniforms similar to those worn by chief petty officers in the navy to disguise themselves while trying to make "buys" for evidence in prohibition cases.

First word of the alleged practice was revealed at a prohibition trial. Dispatches from Philadelphia said that three policemen, Charles Lang, Raymond J. Flood, and J. A. Reeves, had been accused of wearing naval uniforms while attempting to purchase liquor at the Broad street station.

Over protests of defense attorneys in the case, who charged the masquerades were illegal, the defendants were found guilty.

Bring Service in Disrepute.

Naval officials were incensed over the reported incident, pointing out that it tended to bring the service into disrepute.

The commandant of the Philadelphia navy yard was said to be investigating, and Mayor Mackay may be requested by the navy department to send an official report on the incident.

The secretary is considering asking an opinion from Attorney General Mitchell on the best way to proceed. The department of justice probably will be consulted with a view to bringing federal criminal action against the alleged offenders.

A statute provides that an offender is liable to a $300 fine and six months' imprisonment if convicted of impersonating a naval officer or enlisted man by wearing all or part of the navy uniform.

Declines to Comment.

Philadelphia, Pa., July 3.—(AP)—Director of Public Safety Schofield refused to comment tonight on the investigation of the police department ordered by Secretary of the Navy Adams. Mr. Schofield said he would have nothing to say until the navy yard commandant or the navy department at Washington officially had communicated with him.

Rear Admiral Lucian Bostwick, commandant of the Philadelphia navy yard, also refused to comment. He said he knew nothing of charges against the police except what he had seen in the newspapers. He added that he expected to receive orders from Secretary Adams tomorrow and might make a statement then.

Two Bootleggers on Trial.

Action of Secretary Adams was precipitated by the trial of two accused bootleggers yesterday.

The defendants asserted they were arrested by three policemen, one of whom wore the coat and cap of a chief petty officer of the navy. Judge MacNeille made no comment when the subject was mentioned. Patrolman Charles Lang is the man accused of impersonating the naval officer.

Several months ago it was charged that Philadelphia police were attempting to trap small bootleggers by disguising themselves in naval uniforms. At that time Rear Admiral Bostwick protested.

Police Hunt for Burglar Routed by Widow's Shots

The police yesterday hunted in vain for the burglar who, during the early morning hours, invaded the apartment of Mrs. Bertha Crosswhite, a widow, 57 years old, 8612 South Honore street. Mrs. Crosswhite routed the robber with a revolver, firing several shots at him as he fled. He escaped with $10 of her money.

Fourth of July Baby Found

Mary Alice, red headed, with blue blanket, and white dress, left in parked auto.

Taken to Orphanage

"ROOSEVELT FOR PRESIDENT CLUBS" WORRY REGULARS

New York, July 3.—[Special.]—"Roosevelt for President" clubs, which have been springing up throughout the country, are seriously embarrassing the Roosevelt people here, it was authoritatively learned today.

GOV. ROOSEVELT. [Acme Photo.]

The principal reason for this is that several of these club organizers represent, in their respective states, the anti-organization men, men who have fought the regular leaders for years. The result has been, in some cases, that the important leaders have written in to New York to ask what these Roosevelt clubs are all about, anyway.

This condition does not apply to all of the clubs, but the fact is that the Roosevelt faction is becoming somewhat worried and has been doing quite a bit of explaining. Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt's associates maintain that there is, at this time, absolutely no organization promoting his presidential candidacy, that any efforts being made in that direction are being carried on by volunteers and not by the Democratic state committee.

It is understood that from more than two-thirds of the states there have come from responsible Democratic leaders assurances of support. There is no questioning the continued optimism of Mr. Roosevelt's friends in New York, an optimism dimmed, to be sure, by the virtually world-wide response to Mr. Hoover's debt moratorium plea.

DR. WISE CHARGES BRITISH RULE IS INSULT TO JEWS

Claims Palestine Arabs Incited Attacks.

BASEL, Switzerland, July 3.—(AP)—A sensation was caused at the Zionist congress today by Dr. Stephen S. Wise of New York, president of the Jewish Institute of Religion, who attacked the activities of the British government under the Palestine mandate.

DR. STEPHEN S. WISE.

"I indict the present government of England before the moral conscience of the world as having tragically failed to fulfill its obligations under the Palestine mandate to the Jewish people," Dr. Wise said.

Zion Leader Leaves Room.

During the speech Dr. Chaim Weizmann, who retired this week as president of the Zionist movement, rose from the platform and walked from the room. In the lobby he explained that he was forced to withdraw because he considered Dr. Wise's speech unparliamentary and "irresponsible."

Laborite delegates sought to prevent Dr. Wise from continuing, but were overruled by the chair. Later, American delegates of the group headed by Louis Lipsky, former president of the Zionist organization of America, said Dr. Wise did not speak in the name of their group.

Charges British Incite Arabs.

Security, land and immigration are the three major points for the establishment of a Jewish national home, Dr. Wise declared.

"Security should not rest on British bayonets, but on an ending of the effort on the part of British officials in Palestine to incite the Arabs against the Jews," he said.

"Our second demand is free, legal access to the land, and our third is freedom of immigration. During the past two years we have had none of these. We have had bad laws administered by worse officials. We have had insults, indignity, shame, and degredation from the British government, which learned the art of fifty-fifty from the Jewish agency, 50 per cent for the Arabs and 50 per cent against the Jews."

Zionists Reject MacDonald Note.

All of the general Zionists, except the American delegation and the group headed by Dr. M. D. Eder of Great Britain, today agreed upon a resolution to be presented to the congress, to the effect that the MacDonald letter interpreting the White paper of October, 1930, is unsatisfactory.

SHAFT TO WILSON TO BE UNVEILED IN POLAND TODAY

POZNAN, Poland, July 3.—(AP)—Gutzon Borglum's monument in honor of Woodrow Wilson, donated by Ignace Paderewski, will be unveiled tomorrow in the presence of Mrs. Wilson, Ambassador Willys, and President Mosciekt.

Maj. Cyril Ratajski will accept the monument in behalf of the city and Mr. Willys will read a special message from President Hoover.

The part President Wilson played in the liberation of Poland will be explained by Prof. Zoltowski of Poznan university.

Bookseller Pays to Keep Yarrow in Jail Longer

Walter Shaver, a bookseller, appeared yesterday at the county jail and paid to jail officials $3.50 to keep the Rev. Philip Yarrow in jail for another week. Shaver was awarded a $5,000 judgment against the minister some time ago on a charge of malicious prosecution. Mr. Yarrow failed to pay the money and was lodged in jail. Under the law Shaver must pay 50 cents a day for the minister's board. The minister's attorney announced several days ago that friends were raising a $6,000 bond for Yarrow's release pending an appeal.

FEWER PEOPLE MARRYING; THEY CAN'T AFFORD IT

Illinois Rate Down 10 Per Cent.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 3.—[Special.]—Marriages dropped almost 10 per cent in Illinois during 1930, the first year of economic depression, figures published by the bureau of the census disclosed today. The divorce rate also dropped, but only 2.1 per cent.

According to the returns received at the census bureau there were 75,951 marriages performed in Illinois during the year 1930, as compared with 84,092 in 1929, representing a decrease of 8,141, or 9.7 per cent. The marriage rate was about the same as in 1922 when 75,205 marriage services were performed.

9.9 per Thousand.

Bureau statisticians estimated that the number of marriages per 1,000 in 1930 at 9.9 compared with 11.1 in 1929, when the stock market was booming and jobs more plentiful. Divorces during that year per 1,000 were 2.09, compared to 2.01 in 1930.

During the year 1930 there were 15,432 divorces granted in Illinois, as compared with 15,758 in 1929, representing a decrease of 326 or 2.1 per cent. In 1922 there were 11,057 divorces granted. Annulments also showed a decrease, dropping from 249 in 1929 to 202 in 1930.

Cook County Tops List.

Cook county topped the list in marriages and divorces. During 1930 there were 35,401 marriages, compared with 41,066 in 1929. During 1930 the number of divorces granted in Cook county dropped from 9,443 to 9,188. Lake county had 4,779 marriages in 1930, compared with 4,199 in 1929.

BATTLING SCOT'S FIGHTING PALS FACE SUSPENSION

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, July 3.—When the house of commons met today, still "scandalized" over yesterday's free for all fight which resulted in the forcible ejection of James McGovern, a Scottish Labor member, it was informed that the incident had not been closed. The other Laborites, who swung at the attendants trying to seize McGovern or jumped on their backs and fought to prevent the removal of the hefty Scot, are to be subjected to "appropriate action" on Monday.

In the absence of Prime Minister MacDonald, Philip Snowden, chancellor of the exchequer, informed the house that the prime minister would ask that action be taken. This probably means the suspension of McGovern's champions. McGovern has already been suspended for the rest of the session or until next November.

Another Row; But No Blood.

The other members, known to have taken part in the melée and who swung a few fists in the Scotsman's behalf, are James Maxton, John Beckett, G. Buchanan, and J. Kinley.

Today the house was treated to an equally bitter, but to a more dignified battle of words between David Lloyd George, the Liberal leader, and Sir John Simon, noted lawyer, who bolted the party last week. Speaking on the finance bill, embodying the land tax principles, to which he has been bitterly opposed, Sir John declared that Lloyd George had forsaken liberal party principles in supporting Mr. Snowden's land tax project.

After reddening considerably as Sir John, who was standing right behind him and made several clever thrusts to the delight of the Conservative members, Lloyd George rose to defend his stand. He scored with the statement:

"It is an old method of those, who transfer their allegiance, to always declare that those they have left behind are departing from principle."

CITY EMPLOYES OFFER OWN PAY REDUCTION PLAN

Oppose Vacation Without Salary.

City employes yesterday drafted an alternative plan to the proposal of an enforced two weeks' vacation without pay for all municipal workers. Their plan is that for fourteen weeks, starting July 12, all city employes be docked one-seventh of their weekly pay.

A. A. SPRAGUE.

The deduction would theoretically be for Sundays, for which they are now paid but do not work. Actually, it was pointed out, it would effect the same saving, estimated at $2,400,000, which would be effected by payless vacations.

Plan Praised by Sprague.

"It is a wonderful plan and will eliminate much of the objection by employes. I have referred it to the finance committee for consideration," said Commissioner of Public Works Sprague, who heads a committee of the mayors' cabinet which has been considering payless vacations and other economy measures in the city hall.

Col. Sprague's committee has already recommended to the finance committee of the council an ordinance enforcing its plan of payless vacations. Both plans will be discussed Tuesday by the committee.

Object to Payless Plan.

City employes have objected to payless vacations, expressing the fear that next year they may have trouble getting back their privilege of vacations with pay. The employes' plan meets this objection. It was drafted by employes in the office of City Controller Szymczak, headed by City Auditor Thomas F. German.

BLACKMER SUES TO VOID TEAPOT DOME PENALTY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 3.—[Special.]—Harry M. Blackmer, Denver oil millionaire, who fled to France when disclosures began to be made in the Teapot Dome scandals seven years ago, petitioned the United States Supreme court today to review the decisions of two lower courts which held him guilty of contempt for refusal to testify in the Fall-Sinclair conspiracy cases.

In a petition for a writ of certiorari submitted by his counsel, George Gordon Battle, Blackmer challenged the constitutionality of the Walsh act, under which $100,000 of his property was seized by the government, pending final judgment on two contempt cases in each of which he was fined $30,000.

Blackmer was an official of the Midwest Refining company and was charged with being directing head of the Continental Trading company, Ltd., of Canada, out of whose proceeds former Secretary Fall was alleged to have received more than $233,000. Since 1924 Blackmer has been a virtual exile from this country.

When it seemed apparent that Blackmer would resist all efforts to bring him to the United States to testify, Senator Thomas J. Walsh [Dem., Mont.], prosecutor of the Teapot Dome inquiry, introduced a bill, which congress approved, authorizing seizure of the property of such recalcitrant witnesses.

Subpoenas were served abroad upon Blackmer, and James E. O'Neill, another wanted witness, but neither was induced to return.

Subsequently the Supreme court of the District of Columbia ordered that $100,000 in Liberty bonds, belonging to Blackmer, be seized, to cover the fines and court costs. Blackmer fought the judgment in the District Supreme court which, however, ruled against him, and the ruling of which was upheld by the District of Columbia court of appeals two months ago.

Gallant Knight, western racing's fleetest 4-year-old, hero of recent revivals of the Grainger and Peabody Memorials, holder of the American record of 1:16 1-5 for six and a half furlongs, will race for one mile and a furlong for $35,000 today in the STARS AND STRIPES HANDICAP with fourteen other crack middle distance horses.

Opposing him will be The Nut, under the silks of Silas Mason and Arnold Hanger; A la Carte, which won the last Ohio Derby for the Alton Stable; John Schorr's Silverdale, winner of two Arlington Inaugurals; A. Bartelsen's Sidney Grant, Brookdale Handicap winner at Aqueduct the other day; R. M. Eastman's Mike Hall, winner of more than $200,000 in stakes and purses; John Hertz's Valenciennes, winner last year of an Arlington Matron Handicap and a Thanksgiving at Bowie; Satin Spar, Willard Mack's California miler. The Stars and Stripes field represents the finest of American thoroughbred production and the highest American sportsmanship.

It will be the richest race for 3-year-olds and over that will have been run in the United States this season.

SEVEN RACES—First at 2:15 p. m.

Marshall Field, well-known sportsman, who has brought his stable for Arlington racing.

SPEND the glorious Fourth at Arlington and enjoy the thrills, color and gaiety that only this famous shrine of sport can offer. At Arlington there is sport for sport's sake only and the breeding of the thoroughbred. It brings to Chicago the spirit of Belmont, Saratoga, Ascot and Longchamps with a non-profit policy that sport lovers acclaim as the greatest achievement of sport in modern times.

Unique non-profit policy

Just think what this non-profit means to the public. Arlington does not depend upon betting for its existence, therefore the program is built entirely on the basis of entertainment. It is the only track in the West that offers the steeplechase. This you can see three times a week in addition to the seven great flat races.

The richest purses in America, $700,000 for 30 days of racing are offered at Arlington to attract the smartest thoroughbreds, the most famous trainers and jockeys, the leading owners and sportsmen. Lowest purse offered is $1,500, and Arlington is the only track in the world which has a minimum purse at this high level.

Shrine for sport's sake

All this was made possible two years ago when a group of Chicago's leading citizens met and subscribed a total of $2,000,000 in varying amounts from $25,000 to $150,000 up with the understanding that they were to get not one cent in profit or even interest on their subscription. They did this as a matter of civic pride—to lift horse racing in Chicago to heights never before thought possible—to attract a class of citizens never before interested in horse racing—for the breeding of thoroughbreds—and to give the public the opportunity of enjoying racing at its best.

You, too, will get the thrill of a lifetime when you visit Arlington. Come out for the holiday. Admission only $2.20.

TEACHERS SPEND DAYS OF POVERTY WAITING FOR PAY

Describe Want in Homes; Hunt Loans in Vain.

With almost their last hope for payment of a part of their long overdue salaries destroyed with the announcement that the state legally could not issue tax anticipation warrants against the school distributive fund, Chicago teachers yesterday told of hearing the wolf howl at the door.

"I've known what it is to be hungry recently and I've borrowed from every available source and can borrow no more," said Mrs. H., a playground teacher. "There have been days when I went without food all day long while I tried to raise money."

Mrs. H. pointed out that playground teachers have not received pay since April 15. Her payments on $3,000 of life insurance have lapsed, so that she has no security for her 11 year old son, she said. Since her divorce the child has lived with aged grandparents in Kansas and recently she has not been able to help support him.

Final Notice on Bills.

Last fall Mrs. H. lost $465 in a bank which failed. She has no one to go to for a loan, she said, and is unable to pay the interest on the $50 loan made at a loan company. She has had a final notice to pay her light bill, her rent is unpaid, and she owes for furniture and doctor bills. At her pleas to have her son come to live with her this summer have been abandoned.

Mrs. D., a widow, who has an adopted son 4 years old, has been taking care of three sisters who lost their jobs last fall. This spring she rented a farm in Michigan and the sisters went there to live, thinking it would be cheaper than the city. She is now behind in rent and they are in danger of eviction. Her father and one sister died last year, most of the expense for illness falling on her.

Although Mrs. D. in May won a judgment against the board of education for the death of her husband, an instructor, who was killed while he was at duty on a playground two years ago, she was unable to collect. She is entitled to half his salary for eight years after his death, she said. At present she has a hard time getting the carfare to take her to the playground where she is an instructor.

Hopes For Milk Credit.

Mrs. M.'s husband has pneumonia, and she is trying to borrow money to care for him and their child.

J. S., 29 years old, who teaches in a junior high school, told of his trouble with loan sharks and his failure to obtain credit at his bank. He had no collateral. He is paying for his home on which there are two mortgages. It represents an investment of about $5,000.

"My wife has had hospital and doctor bills for the last three years, in addition to those incurred when our two children were born," he said. "Right now both the babies need shoes, but they just can't have them. If the milkman holds off, I'll be thankful."

A teacher with a wife and one child had saved $500 toward purchase of a home. He divided it between two banks and kept his checking account in a third, all of which closed their doors. Having no collateral, he has had to borrow as best he could from relatives.

Some Lose Their Jobs.

A teacher whose three sons, all linotype operators, lost their jobs because the first of September and the first of November, was called by his boss the other day and asked to come down to talk over his affairs. "I can't come," he replied. "I haven't funds for carfare."

Frank X. Henke, a director in the Chicago Teachers' Union Credit organization formed in February, said the union can supply only a small part of the loans which are applied for. A teacher who owed $800 for hospital and doctor bills for sickness in his family had to be refused as he had no security. On the other hand, the union was able to lend $200 to a man with four children whose oldest girl, working her way through college, suddenly lost her job. She has stayed in school.

LABOR BULLETIN CALLS BUSINESS OUTLOOK BETTER

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 3.—[Special.]—A more optimistic view of the business outlook is taken by the American Federation of Labor in its bulletin, monthly survey of business, issued today. This publication asserts that new confidence has been introduced into business partly by the international debt moratorium plan and partly by other factors such as rising stock and grain prices and a turning away from hand to mouth buying.

In calling attention to what it found a change for the better in public sentiment the bulletin stated: "The debt plan has brought a psychological change that may mark the turning point toward improvement. Hope, partly to the promise of relief for Europe, partly to constructive developments in business which are now becoming evident, there is a definite change for the better in business sentiment."

Wife Compelled to Ride in Rumble Seat; Gets Divorce

Mrs. Helen Peloquin, 12853 Greenwood avenue, Blue Island, told Judge Edmund Desort yesterday that her husband compelled her to ride in the rumble seat whenever they went out in the family automobile. Even when it rained or snowed, she asserted, her husband, Edgar, sat alone behind the wheel and left her exposed to the weather. Finally he installed a radio in the car and pulled down the rear window so that she couldn't hear it, she said. She was given a divorce on charges of desertion.

TEACHERS END SESSION WITH 50 RESOLUTIONS

Discrimination on Marriage Protested.

A resolution protesting against any discrimination against women teachers because they are married was one of more than fifty, covering a wide variety of subjects, which the fifteenth annual convention of the American Federation of Teachers adopted at its final session yesterday at the Congress hotel.

Other resolutions opposed discrimination against teachers on religious or racial grounds, and opposed religious instruction in public schools.

A number of resolutions dealt with the present economic situation, opposing any reduction in either school appropriations or teachers' salaries, advocating state income taxes and urging that school funds be obtained by such taxes. A general national unemployment insurance system was advocated.

Ask Modification of Rule.

The convention urged that in cases where school authorities demand five years of college training for teachers, they modify their practice and accept a year of business experience in lieu of the fifth college year.

"Most of the widespread criticism of education is that teaching is done by people out of contact with life. A year of commercial experience makes a teacher far more valuable, educationally and economically, than a fifth year in college," the resolution stated.

Howard Rule Indorsed.

The administration of Howard university, Negro college at Washington, D. C., by Dr. Mordecai Johnson, was indorsed by the convention, which criticised the statement of Representative Will R. Wood of Indiana, chairman of the house committee on appropriations, that he would vote for no more appropriations for the school so long as Dr. Johnson continues as its head.

On the floor of the convention it was charged that Wood dislikes Johnson because the college president had blocked attempts of politicians to use faculty posts at the school as patronage plums for Negroes unqualified to instruct there.

POLICE SLAYER CONFESSES PART IN BANK HOLDUP

Coy Thompson, Kentucky gunman who killed Policeman James Casey when the policeman arrested him on the south side Wednesday night for molesting a woman, confessed yesterday that he was a Kentucky jail breaker and that he helped rob a bank at Elvington, Ill.

He made his confessions after authorities in both towns had identified newspaper pictures printed in connection with the killing of Casey. Elsie Brown, arrested with Thompson, also confessed that he took part in the holdup on June 12 of the Farmers' State bank at Elvington, in which they took $1,365. They named a third confederate, whom they knew as "Tex" Green.

Thompson broke jail in Mayfield, Ky., on April 7, while he was serving a sentence for bootlegging. He and Brown also admitted holdups of two Chicago beer flats, the addresses of which they did not know.

Chief of Detectives John Norton yesterday praised Detectives Thomas and James Curtin, brothers, who were off duty at the time that Thompson shot Casey, and who captured him shortly after the shooting.

Find Drowning, Not Gun, Caused Death; Release 4

What at first were believed to be bullet wounds in the body of Anthony Mikolajczak, 20 years old, 4404 South St. Louis avenue, were found yesterday by Coroner's Physician A. Levinson to be merely bruises. Dr. Levinson fixed the cause of death as drowning. The body had been found in a swimming hole at 144th street and Crawford avenue, Midlothian, and on the assumption the youth was shot and the body thrown in the water, four persons who had been bathing there had been held for questioning. The autopsy, however, cleared up the mistake, and the bathers were released.

CITY'S OFFICIAL GREETER ON JOB; GETS NO SALARY

George D. Gaw, appointed by Mayor Cermak to be official greeter of Chicago's distinguished visitors, took over his payless job yesterday and announced himself ready for all comers from European monarchs down to the chairman of the smallest conventions.

GEORGE D. GAW.

"Good old fashioned American hospitality is what we'll give our visitors," said Mr. Gaw. "As official greeter I hope to be able to redeem Chicago's name in other cities. I expect to meet every convention head upon his arrival and make him feel at home so that his delegates will carry good reports of Chicago back with them."

A white automobile, carrying the emblem of the city, and two white motorcycles for a police escort will be Mr. Gaw's major pieces of equipment. The automobile, its chauffeur, and maintenance have been provided as a part of a deal in which the city bought 20 automobiles, while the motorcycles were thrown in with an order of motorcycles for the police department. Mr. Gaw is head of the Gaw-O'Hara Envelop company.

WIFE, 18, CHARGES SHE WAS DRUGGED INTO MARRIAGE

The charge that she was drugged, carried to Crown Point, and frightened into going through a marriage ceremony was made by Mrs. Edna Wolf Gillette, 914 North Karlov avenue, 18 year old high school girl, in an annulment bill filed in Superior court yesterday.

Her husband is James A. Gillette, 22 years old, 239 South Paulina street. She charged that on May 24, three weeks after he had met her at a party, he called at her home and asked permission to take her to meet his mother. Instead, she asserts, he took her to see a matronly woman whom he introduced as his aunt. There, she charges, she was given a soft drink which she believes was drugged.

She was taken to Crown Point in a semi-conscious condition, she charges, and Gillette, by telling her that her reputation had been ruined, coerced her into a marriage ceremony, she states. She left him when they returned to Chicago.

Gillette last night denied his wife's allegations. The marriage was of her own asking, he said, and the separate rooms were obtained at his request and against her will. Gillette asserted his mother met them in his aunt's home and that no food or drink was obtained there. He himself returned to her parents' home, he said, to get her clothes, but her father would not permit her to return. He charged that filing of the suit was the result of his wife's parents alienating her affections.

JOLIET PRISON REJECTS WOMAN UP FOR FORGERY

Charleston, Ill., July 3.—(AP)—Mrs. Mildred Courtney of Hammond, Ind., who was taken to Joliet prison on Wednesday to serve a term of from one to ten years for check forgery and confidence game operations, has been returned to Charleston, having been rejected by the warden.

"We no longer accept women prisoners," the warden told Sheriff Vincent Aye. "She will have to be committed to the women's prison at Dwight." The woman will remain a prisoner in the county jail here until recommitted by Judge George W. Bristow. Circuit court will not reconvene until July 20.

Mrs. Courtney is the first woman to be sentenced to the penitentiary from Coles county in more than forty years.

DECISION MAKES TAX LEVY SHAKY UNLESS IT'S FAIR

Attitude of Bankers on Loans Explained.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

One of the major reasons, it was disclosed yesterday, why the banks hesitate to lend millions to pay past due bills and pay rolls of the local governments is the so-called Aldrich case.

Under the decision in this case lawyers say they are doubtful whether the present taxing machinery will turn out a valid tax assessment for 1931. Consequently they doubt whether the local governments will be able to get the taxes to pay off loans.

The state supreme court handed down its decision in the Aldrich case on June 20, 1930, and denied a rehearing on Oct. 10. In the opinion of Hayden Bell, county tax attorney, this decision established a new rule of law for the state courts.

Changes Burden of Proof.

According to Bell's interpretation, the Supreme court holds that if a complaining taxpayer establishes one example of wilfull discrimination, the entire assessment is tainted, and the burden of proof to show that the assessment is valid is placed upon the county. Previously, Mr. Bell said yesterday, the burden of proof had been placed upon the taxpayer to show that the entire assessment was invalid.

Mr. Bell says he expects enormous difficulties in proving that the 1930 assessment is valid, if the board of assessors and board of review reverts to the practices in use before the scientific appraisal of real estate was made by Harry S. Cutmore. He sees much trouble if any of the information cards, inaugurated by Cutmore as basic data for real estate tax valuations, are removed from the board of assessors.

A History of the Case.

The Supreme court case was brought by Frederick C. Aldrich as trustee for 13.6 acres of vacant land at Homan avenue and Thirty-first street, which had been valued by the assessing bodies at 145 per cent of its fair cash value, nearly half again as much as it was worth.

The court held this was a fraudulent assessment, so much so that it indicated the assessing bodies had not been honest in the assessment. Instead of using intelligent judgment the assessors had wilfully discriminated against this property.

How Values Varied.

It was shown by Aldrich—his counsel being Scott, Bancroft, Martin, and MacLeish—that the valuations placed upon property generally were 40 per cent of the fair cash value. Evidence was presented showing that the assessed valuation in Chicago in 1923 averaged 34.5 per cent of the full value of real estate, in 1924 it was 31.9 per cent, in 1925 it was 31.2 per cent, in 1926 it was 31.3 per cent, and in 1927 was 35.9 per cent.

There was further evidence that some property was valued for assessing purposes at 5 per cent of its real value, while other properties were assessed at 150 per cent. Full use was made in the case of the report of Dr. Herbert Simpson of Northwestern university on the discriminatory assessment of real estate.

Assessment Lists Withheld.

It was further charged that it was part of the plan of the board of assessors and board of review in making discriminatory assessments to withhold publication of the assessment lists which would have revealed the inequalities.

The State Supreme court cited a decision of the late Justice Taft of the United States Supreme court, which says that "the whole assessment on all classes of property was to be regarded as but one judgment and that if fraud entered into such judgment any one injuriously affected thereby had the right to complain."

"And this is true," said the court, "although the particular assessing board assessing the complainant's property may have been wholly free from fault, or fraud or intentional discrimination."

"That means that a complainant does not have to show his assessment is wrong," said Mr. Bell, "but if he can show that the assessment of some other property owner is out of line the whole assessment is faulty.

"If such a showing can be made on the 1930 assessment, then the burden of proof is shifted to the county to show that the assessment is good and valid. And what can the county show if the information cards disappear, or if the assessors wilfully discriminate in favor of certain property owners?"

MYSTERY VICTIM DIES OF POISON; SUSPECT SUICIDE

Death early this morning sealed in mystery the identity of a well dressed young man who was found unconscious from poison last night at Division and Wells streets. The man had collapsed from arsenic poisoning and was taken to the Henrotin Memorial hospital. During his conscious moments he refused to give his name or any other information. In his clothing, however, detectives found a note which caused them to suspect suicide. The note said: "I won't marry a man of your mean disposition.—Katherine." Below this was a notation in another handwriting, which said: "Very sorry. I love you, Katherine.—Nick." The man was about 35 years old, black haired and brown eyed.

Boy's Plea for Dog Wins Help from Judge

Samuel Zeszutko, 15 year old, 11315 Langley avenue, was one of thirty-two dog owners who appeared before Judge John J. Lupe in the South Chicago court yesterday to explain why their dogs had no licenses. Sam's answer was that he didn't have the $3 to purchase one. Policeman Ralph Grogerson informed the judge that he had himself gone to Sam's father and asked him to pay the fee, but that the elder Zeszutko had remarked that the dog, named Queenie, was not worth $3. Sam's plea for Queenie was so moving that Judge Lupe handed him the necessary amount to save her from the executioner.

RICH CATALONIA TELLS SPAIN IT WANTS SELF-RULE

Demands Right to Keep Wealth.

BY JAY ALLEN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MADRID, July 3.—The constitution of the self-governing generalitat of Catalonia which Col. Francisco Macia's 41 deputies will press on the newly elected parliament at Madrid has been checked over and endorsed by that redoubtable chieftain. His personal envoy, Luis Companies, former civil governor of Barcelona, today presented it confidentially to Provisional President Alcala Zamora so that the government may know the nature of the document.

Despite the secrecy, which surrounded the drafting of the pact by five Catalan jurists in the isolated village of Núria, aided by the indorsement of the president and ministers of the de facto generalitat, its contents have been revealed.

Divided Into 4 Provinces.

Catalonia is clearly defined as a state composed of four provinces, Barcelona, Taragona, Gerona and Lerida. The state recognizes the prerogatives of the central government only in a minimum degree in the matter of foreign ralations, defense, communications and the levying of indirect taxation.

For herself Catalonia energetically reserves the essentials of self-government and educational, social and penal legislation. Aside from its service in the postoffices, customs house and the army, the republican government would be represented in the state of Catalonia by an envoy.

Even if parliament admits the federal principles of Catalonia, whether in an entirely federal Spain, which the commission drafting the republican constitution thought impossible, or grafted onto a unitary Spain, there are two things which the Catalans will have to put up a fight for when they get to Madrid.

Wants to Keep Income Tax

Their constitution reserves for the generalitat all revenues other than those recognized as direct, such as customs, income, postal and public service taxes, salt, sugar and monopolies on petroleum, matches and tobacco. The generalitat reserves for itself the enjoyment of the income tax and multiple taxes on property, business turnover and what not in the richest corner of Spain. Catalonia, with one-tenth of the population of Spain, pays one-forth of the taxes. Her industry would realize vast benefits by self-government, although she seems to expect the republic to maintain high tariff barriers.

After Sunday's triumph at the polls it was expected that the five jurists drafting the constitution would go the limit, but it is learned that their constitution will hardly be changed as they believe they have already asked the limit in federalism. They have chosen the German rather than the American model. They have been careful to avoid anything that suggests separatism.

Although the Catalan deputies will be instructed by Col. Macia to make a great show of sympathy for the Basque regionalists, they are not expected to press the point. Col. Macia is a radical, backed by syndicalists. He has left all religious matters to the central government. The Basques are Catholic conservatives, who demand a special concordat with Rome.

Insists on Volunteer Army.

Col. Macia went through the draft of the constitution yesterday and attempted to stiffen nearly every article, but was gently dissuaded by Amadeo Hurtado, his canny legal adviser, and Jaimie Carner, president of the drafting committee. He is unbeaten yet on one point. The army of the republic must be a volunteer army, he insists, but if it isn't, the Catalans cannot be forced into obligatory peacetime training.

ITALY PROPOSES DISARMAMENT AS THE NEXT STEP

Calls It Vital to World Prosperity.

ROME, July 3.—(AP)—President Hoover's proposal for a war debt moratorium opens a road that should lead to some real disarmamept, Foreign Minister Dino Grandi said today.

The Italian foreign minister declared the President's action was the first genuinely practical means of helping the world and that Italy was wholeheartedly behind the movement. Grandi asserted his country was all the more strongly for the Hoover suggestion because disarmament was now brought into the realm of possible things and both Premier Mussolini and himself believed that European reconstruction can be achieved through economic coöperation and disarmament.

Hopes for Naval Accord.

Incidentally, the minister said he "still hoped for a Franco-Italian naval accord, which we and the British thought had been reached last March."

The minister outlined his government's views at this time because of the approaching visit of Secretary of State Stimson, whom Grandi knew well during the London naval conference, and with whom he had the most cordial relations.

"Stimson is a man of exceptionally practical mind, with whom it is always possible to talk frankly and simply," Grandi said.

"We accepted Hoover's plan in all its consequences and in all its significance, and we are ready to travel the road he has opened.

"First Practical Plan."

"I tell you in all frankness that the Hoover proposal is the first really practical initiative that has been taken in these years of crisis.

"I do not wish to undervalue the work done by the Pan-European commission, but its effects will only come slowly. The Hoover proposal offers the advantages of immediate action.

"Some day, perhaps, its true value as statesmanship will be realized when it is seen how valuable it will have proved in anticipating and preventing events that would have been very painful for America as well as for Europe.

Says Disarmament Is Vital.

"Mussolini is a man determined 'to carry out' his initiatives. Disarmament problems are vast and complex, but the Hoover proposal already has brought relaxation to world tension and has resulted in an atmosphere of 'good will.'

"These must be utilized for disarmament—it is useless to create illusions. Until the world is disarmed peace will be insecure. Work done for disarmament is work for consolidation of peace.

"Now it is difficult to see the utility of a setlement of the financial obligations of the war under a regime of armament races. Excessive armaments, as are many today, are disturbing elements in international coöperation.

Questions Linked Up.

"Creditor peoples have the right to ask if their sacrifices are destined to increase the state of insecurity, which is most damaging to general economic recovery. On the other hand, their budgets, deprived of reparations receipts, must be balanced by economies, and these can only be made on armament expenses.

"There is no definite diplomatic connection between questions of disarmament, reparations and debts, but I think they are moral ones in the sense that I have indicated because there exists a relation between military budgets, debts and reparations.

"These two years of crisis have shown how necessary is solidarity. Only the prosperity of all makes the prosperity of one.

"Europe cannot get along without America and if this sentiment spreads the world will be better off."

Shotgun Bandits Take $900 from Head of Beverage Co.

Four men, two armed with shotguns and two with revolvers, surprised Joseph Arronson, 2553 Division street, president of the Northwest Beverage company, 3691 Grand avenue, alone in his office late last night as he was counting the day's receipts. Taking the $900 in front of Arronson the bandits shut him in a closet and escaped in an automobile.

VANDERBILT AND ARNO COMMIT MORE CARNAGE

Swap Sneers, at Least, in Reno Depot.

Reno, Nev., July 3.—[Special.]—Peter Arno, satiric artist, and Cornelius Vanderbilt Jr., principals in a personal feud which began here several weeks ago when Vanderbilt went gunning for the artist because of the latter's alleged attentions to Mrs. Mary Weir Vanderbilt, met early this morning in the local railroad depot.

"The story is utter nonsense; Vanderbilt stood on the platform with two thugs twenty feet away, and cast ferocious looks at me," asserted Arno.

To all of which Chief of Police Kirkley commented: "When that pair actually do something violent, instead of talking and spitting at one another like a pair of alley cats, I'll take a hand."

How the War Began.

The hostilities between Arno and Vanderbilt had their inception, it is said, in a party at which the Vanderbilts were hosts. That was June 10. Vanderbilt, reports stated, believing the artist was too attentive to Mrs. Vanderbilt, called him aside. "You lay off my wife, Peter, or there will be trouble," he said.

Several other incidents followed, climaxing about a week later when Arno and Mrs. Vanderbilt drove up to the Vanderbilt residence. Vanderbilt blocked the door, exhibited a pistol to his wife, and shouted he "was going to kill Arno." The artist retreated. Later Vanderbilt announced the gun was empty, but insisted he would seek vengeance on Arno. On June 19 Vanderbilt sued his wife for divorce on the ground of extreme cruelty.

Carnage Is Renewed.

The Arno-Vanderbilt fued rested until this morning, when the two met in the railroad station. Arno was accompanied by Mrs. Florence Rice Smith, his fiancée. She is the daughter of Grantland Rice, sports writer, and recently divorced Sidney Smith, New York broker.

Vanderbilt, according to his story, first believed the woman was Mrs. Vanderbilt, but later recognized Mrs. Smith and commented to bystanders on her presence with Arno. Arno, according to Vanderbilt, made some slurring remark, and later followed it by addressing Vanderbilt as follows: "Well, you can have Mary now." Vanderbilt hit him on the jaw, according to Vanderbilt. Arno boarded the train with Mrs. Smith after police had stepped in.

Arno Tells His Side.

Arno, who received his divorce decree last week, was queried on his foe's statement. He wired a reply branding it nonsense. He added that Vanderbilt and his "thugs" followed him, and that Vanderbilt threw a blackjack at him, yelling "childish epithets." He described Vanderbilt's actions as "rabbit courage" and "grandstand play." Police on the scene said they saw no fisticuffs, although they did notice a missile being thrown. Vanderbilt's special police officer verified the tale of the punch.

STEALS FROM NEWSIE; JAILED.

LINDSAY LIGHT BUYS PLANT IN DU PAGE COUNTY

Purchases Five Acres at West Chicago.

BY AL CHASE.

Purchase of five acres of industrial property in West Chicago by the Lindsay Light company yesterday disclosed plans for the eventual removal of all of the Chicago activities of that concern from Chicago to the Du Page county subdivision. The site, purchased from the National Supply company of Toledo, contains eight one story buildings with 33,000 square feet of floor area, and formerly was used by the Union Tool company, a subsidiary of the National Supply company. It is at Factory and Ann streets, just outside of the village limits.

According to C. R. Lindsay Jr., chairman of the board and president of the Lindsay Light company, the chemical end of the concern's business will be moved from 361 East Illinois street, now leased, to West Chicago within from four to six months. Within a year and a half the company expects to sell its plant at 161 East Grand avenue, where it manufactures gas and electric light fixtures, and concentrate its entire business at the suburban plant.

The company manufactures cerium and other chemicals used by glass and ceramic manufacturers. It also makes incandescent gas mantels, gas lamps and electric fixtures. The new Du Page county plant is served by the Outer Belt line.

Buys Belmont-Lincoln Corner.

Jacob Wolfe has purchased the property at 3145-67 Lincoln avenue and 1541-43 Belmont avenue from Charles Ahlswede for a reported $125,000 cash. The land fronts forty-eight feet on each street. It is occupied by the Goldblatt Department store under a ninety-nine year lease dated March 1, 1929. Sonnenschein, Berkson, Lautmann, Levinson & Morse were attorneys for Mr. Wolfe. George Diersen represented Mr. Ahlswede.

Ida Ross has purchased for cash, subject to $66,000, the eighteen flat building at the southeast corner of 80th street and Drexel avenue from Mary D. Weir. Walter O. Salmon, vice president of the Russell L. Blunt company, Draper & Kramer, and Arthur J. Hoss were brokers.

Coal Company Buys Tract.

The Reiner Coal company has just acquired approximately five acres bounded by Wood street on the west, Paulina street on the east, 59th street on the south and the Pennsylvania railroad on the north. This will be used for the expansion of the buyer's business and, according to John S. Reiner, president, will be one of the most modern coal yards in Chicago.

This tract of land was owned for a number of years by G. Watson French of Davenport, Ia., and was famous at one time as the site of the Titchenor race horse farm, where horses were trained. Van Vlissingen & Co. were brokers.

MR. CERMAK SAVES SOME MONEY.

Mayor Cermak's report of progress in reducing municipal expenses, particularly in the police and fire departments, is as encouraging a piece of news as the taxpayers have read for a long time. He found that the superintendent of the fire department, the fire attorney, and the fire department's physician each had two firemen assigned to him as chauffeurs. Five policemen, collecting a total of $40 a day in wages, were engaged in doling out about $18 worth of gasoline a day to police automobiles. Half a dozen policemen were guarding the stolen automobiles impounded at Navy pier. Police automobiles were running repair bills as high as $800 a month. Firemen paid $240 a month were doing watchmen's work for which a fair wage would be half as much. All these wastes and sinecures have been done away with. The policemen and firemen concerned have been returned to active duty, protecting the lives and property of citizens.

It is true, of course, that any one of these savings amounts to little in relation to the whole budget or even to the whole deficit. Together, however, they create a material reduction in expenses, and more especially they indicate that the mayor is attacking the waste inherited from the previous administration, in a practical manner. Some bureaus of the city government may have to be dispensed with entirely, but for the most part the savings must come in careful trimming of this item and that.

The business of giving the taxpayers a run for their money is not sensational, earns a lot of ill will from the gentlemen separated from their easy chairs, and requires a good deal of hard, detailed work on the part of the man on top. In short, it calls for a competent executive. That is what Mr. Cermak has shown himself to be thus far.

SANITY IN REVOLUTION.

The results of the first election in republican Spain will gratify the friends of political and social progress everywhere. The establishment of a representative form of government, based upon a democratic franchise but capable of functioning competently and responsibly for the common security and progress, is not assured and cannot be secured by one election, but a substantial advance has been made. The extremists have been virtually ignored. No communist candidate was returned and only a handful of monarchist reactionaries. We in America would not think that a parliament composed of more than a score of parties is an efficient or reliable instrumentality, but European nations are given to that sort of thing and the Spanish people were not likely to follow the Anglo-American precedent. The election at any rate puts the government in the hands of the moderate leaders at a time when constitutional foundations are to be laid, and this was essential to the solid development of Spain during its first formative years as a republic. Public opinion seems to be temperate and not inclined to extremes of revolutionary doctrine or sentiment. If the middle party leaders do not fall to wrangling, the republic should manage to get a firm footing.

EX-JUDGE JEAN NORRIS.

Jean Norris, New York City's first woman magistrate, has been removed from office by the decision of the Appellate division, the justices finding the charges against her conduct sustained by proof. The idealistic certainty that politics would get a great purification when women had all its privileges has another upsetting, but the certainty never should have been one, and it was foolish rather than idealistic. No rational society would have had such an illusion of sex differences in political honesty and competence, and yet it is apparent that the ladies have added variety to the scene. There are, as the case of Mrs. Norris reveals, distinctly feminine touches.

She had leaped upon a young girl defendant like a tigress, placed her on trial without warrant and without counsel, and convicted her on insufficient evidence, violating all the prisoner's constitutional rights. The offense was against the morals law. In the case of other defendants, whom evidently she did not like, she altered the record to their prejudice. She took stock in a bonding company and sat in a judicial capacity to decide upon the validity of the bonds, and she hired herself out in testimonial to the worth of a course of treatments she had taken, getting her picture in the advertisements as a magistrate.

There are nuances in these offenses which are feminine. A man judge in his misconduct might have been worse, but he would not have been at once so naive and so direct. He might have wished himself into the bonding company or have been wished into it, but he would not have been so easily found, and he would not have been so artlessly acquisitive as to believe he could use his judicial position as an ad for a nostrum. Nor would he have leaped upon a morals offender with the zeal of a business agent against a scab.

What the invasion of politics by women proves is that there are women in politics. That's about all, and that result might have been guessed at the start.

THE GOVERNMENT'S WHEAT POLICY.

The farm board has announced what it intends to do with the 200 or 250 million bushels of wheat which it owns. The statement lacks precision, but it seems to say that the board will sell not less than 60,000,000 bushels in the next year, no matter what the price may be; and if prices go up the board may sell a good deal more. More than that, the board reserves the right to dispose of unlimited quantities of grain on private contract.

The politicians of Kansas and some misguided interests on the Chicago Board of Trade have been pressing the government to hold its wheat off the market for the current year with the idea that thereby prices would improve. The proposal lacked courage. What the Kansas politicians really wanted was the burning of the wheat, as Brazil has recently burned thousands of bags of coffee. The fact is that as long as the wheat owned by the government remains in existence it will be reckoned as part of the world supply of wheat, and to that extent it will serve to depress prices. Only when the government's wheat has moved into consumption will it cease to influence prices.

Had the farm board never started on its speculative operations the wheat which the government owns would now be out of the way as a result of the orderly marketing processes of which the Chicago Board of Trade for years was the nerve center. We can now see the disorderly marketing methods of which the farm politicians complained so loudly were, in reality, the very essence of order. Today we are confronted with genuine disorder. The government has so thoroughly disorganized the business that any policy adopted by the farm board will seem to be wrong. If it holds its wheat it will prolong the agony and only postpone the evil day. If it disposes of its wheat gradually, as seems to be the approved plan, any considerable improvement in prices is not probable until the operation is at an end, unless a crop disaster intervenes. Meanwhile the storage charges are a heavy drain upon the taxpayers, amounting to many millions of dollars each month.

A wiser policy would have been to throw the wheat on the market as rapidly as it could be absorbed without wide-open breaks in the price. Admittedly, the consequences might have been disturbing, but the disturbance would have been briefer and less injurious to farmers, grain merchants, and taxpayers than the consequences of slow liquidation are likely to be.

POLITICS DEFIES THE LAW.

The law of the United States by which the members of the Illinois legislature were empowered and directed to apportion the state's representation in the house of representatives declares that these representatives shall be elected "by districts composed of contiguous and compact territory and containing as nearly as practicable an equal number of inhabitants."

If our readers will examine the map of congressional districts drawn and adopted by the legislature at its late session [see low right hand corner of this page] they will discover that it does not conform to the law, but strikingly departs from its language and intent. The districts are not "compact" and they do not contain "as nearly as practicable an equal number of inhabitants." What respect was shown for the direction in the law to create "compact" districts when the 17th, the 19th, the 22d, and the 27th districts were drawn?

But that districts should be compact is less important than that they should contain as nearly as practicable an equal number of inhabitants. This requirement is vital to political justice. To defy it is to defy the basic principle of self-government, equality of representation. Yet the legislators who drew the fixed districts and who adopted it have ridden roughshod over this law and the principle it was intended to effectuate. Instead of creating districts containing as nearly as practicable an equal number of inhabitants, we find that the 15th district has a population of 343,293, and the adjoining 17th district 158,738 and the also adjoining 16th district 199,104. We find that the average population of the 14 districts in Cook County is 306,474, and the average population of the 13 districts outside of Cook county is 257,031. As Illinois has a population of 7,630,654, the average of the total 27 districts allowed to the state is 282,595, and all the districts, if the law were obeyed, would approximate that number of inhabitants. But the districts range from 158,734 to 343,293.

Obviously the interests of influential congressmen who wish to retain their jobs, the interests or prejudices of sections of the state, party and special interests have been stronger than respect for the law or for the American principle of political equality. The new congressional apportionment is better than the gross inequalities which had arisen under the old apportionment, but it is nevertheless itself a scandalous perversion of the plain language of the law and of the American principle of equal representation. It should be repealed by the next legislature, which should redistrict the state with respect to law and principle.

Editorial of the Day

[Sioux City (Iowa) Journal.]

The 1930 census showed Chicago had a population of 3,376,438, while the state of Iowa had 2,470,939. Chicago would still have more population than Iowa if the city of Cleveland, O., could be moved out here with its 900,429.

So one gets the impression that Chicago is an enormous city, a metropolis, indeed. Yet reports have it that in Iowa last week-end 11 persons met tragic deaths. Three were drowned, one was a suicide, and seven were killed in motor car accidents. According to the law of averages, Chicago would have as many accidental deaths in a given length of time as all of Iowa and the city of Cleveland. But if there had been seven killed in motor car accidents and three drowned in Chicago over one week-end, the rest of the country would have felt that it was a disgraceful loss of human life.

One wonders whether the rest of the country has been fair toward Chicago in saying it is the crime center of the United States. There probably are more murders in cities far smaller than Chicago. In fact, statistics show that in the past this has been the case. St. Louis is said to have more homicides than Chicago, but its population is only a little more than one-fifth that of the larger city. Meanwhile so far as both crime and accident are concerned, there is likely to be more of each in a densely populated area than elsewhere. On that basis Chicago may not be so bad as painted—or reported.

DIETS FOR CHILDREN.

THE Michigan Dental society bulletin gives the following diets for children 5 to 7 years of age:

BREAKFAST.
Fruit of any kind.
1 egg.
1 slice buttered toast.
1 small serving of cereal with milk and sugar.

NOON.
Tender meat, fish, chicken, or liver.
1 small potato.
½ cup buttered vegetables.
2 leaves of lettuce or other raw food.
1 slice bread and butter.
Simple pudding, ice cream, or fruit.

SUPPER.
Milk soup with vegetable, milk and butter.
Egg, cottage cheese, custard, or liver.
½ cup buttered vegetable.
1 slice bread and butter.
1-3 cup of fruit.
8 ounces of milk.
4 to 6 ounces of milk should be given in the afternoon or at bedtime.

Diet for an average child 7 to 16 years old:

BREAKFAST.
Fruit of any kind.
1 to 2 eggs.
1 slice of toast buttered.

NOON.
Tender meat, fish, chicken, or liver.
1 medium sized potato.
2-3 cup buttered vegetable.
1 slice bread and butter.
Lettuce, celery, or other raw food.
Simple pudding or ice cream or fruit.

SUPPER.
Egg, cottage cheese, liver, or meat.
Potato, rice, or spaghetti.
2-3 cup buttered vegetable.
1 slice bread and butter.
Large serving fruit.
8 ounces milk.

A glass of milk in the midafternoon or at bedtime. The average child should eat daily: 1 quart of milk, at least one egg, 1 serving of meat, chicken, fish, or liver; 2 vegetables, one fruit or tomato, 1 teaspoonful cod liver oil, 6 teaspoons butter. These are to be divided up among the meals as indicated above. Children should not eat between meals except they be given a fruit or a glass of milk.

Foods that children should not eat are: Spices, condiments, coffee, tea, pop, pickles and rich pastries. Sweets may be eaten as a part of a meal but not between meals.

Raw vegetables should be carefully cleaned before being served, otherwise they may carry the eggs of worms and various other parasites, and the bacilli of typhoid and intestinal disorders. The possibility that arsenic will be found on raw vegetables and fruits must not be overlooked. It is customary for farmers to use insect sprays and these contain fairly insoluble poisons.

Fruits should be well washed and peeled. Both poison from sprays and bacteria from dirt are apt to be found around the stem.

NOSEBLEED.

Constant Reader writes: I am a young man, 23 years old. I suffer at different times from nosebleeds, sometimes severe and other times not.

REPLY.

The simplest method of stopping nosebleed is to compress the nostrils with the fingers and lean forward while the nasal cavities fill with blood clots.

To prevent repetition you may need to have a physician cauterize an exposed blood vessel or remove a polyp or adenoids.

FOOD AND ARTHRITIS.

H. L. B. writes:

1. Do you consider the following well to avoid when arthritis is present in marked degree: Pineapple, strawberries, tomato, rhubarb, grapefruit, orange, sweets, starches, prunes?

2. Is lemon juice in hot water good for this trouble?

REPLY.

1. None of these foods bear any particular relation to ordinary arthritis.

2. No.

FIREWORKS.

Chicago, July 3.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Is there a city ordinance carrying a fine and imprisonment for exploding any explosives within two or three blocks of any hospital in Chicago?

C. H. F.

Section 1,228 of the city code is as follows: "Discharge in alleys, back yards, and near hospitals. No person shall fire, discharge, or set off, under any circumstances, or at any time, any firearms, fireworks, or other explosives in any alley or back yard, or within two blocks of any hospital, under a penalty of not more than fifty dollars for each offense."

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

DIRTY AND SMELLY.

Chicago, June 24.—[Friend of the People.]—Is there a city ordinance requiring property owners to supply containers for ashes and garbage? In the 1200 block on Devon avenue there are three flats and three stores that empty the ashes in the back yard, where they also burn the garbage. This makes the surrounding vicinity very dirty and smelly. Can't the people be forced to put containers for the refuse in the alley? M. O.

Report is made that investigation disclosed that the winter's accumulation of ashes had been taken from basement and placed in the yard. Same were removed. Premises are supplied with two concrete receptacles for accommodation of garbage and ashes. Pursuant to notice, hereafter burning of paper and other rubbish will be discontinued.

JOSEPH J. BUTLER,
Superintendent of Streets.

BALANCE YOUR BOOKS.

Chicago, June 27.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I had a balance of $25 in a bank and when I went to withdraw the money the bank officials told me that such a balance did not exist. They told me I had to take their word for it, or else prove they were wrong, as they were too busy to check back for the money. 1. Aren't they supposed to satisfy or prove to a depositor where the mistake was? 2. Can they keep my money from me? D. A. M.

1. If they have been rendering monthly accounts and you have made no objection to those accounts, then we would consider that you are to blame.

2. They have the power to take this position. Your only remedy would be to bring suit against them and in order to win, you would have to prove that your account was right.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

IF ANYBODY FROM MARS is in the audience, will he please stand quite still while we explain to him the booming, screeching, popping, and general commotion he hears around him today? It is an old American custom today to celebrate the Declaration of Independence by exploding gunpowder in as many different ways as possible. If, Man from Mars, you do not know, we may explain that the Declaration of Independence declares that all men are created free and equal. Of course, the 18th amendment has changed things to a considerable extent, but, nevertheless, the clause "free and equal" is fondly remembered by a few.

IN ORDER TO SHOW our great joy over the independence of our country it is the custom of a great many patriots to make all the noise possible on the Fourth and to lay fingers, ears, and bits of epidermis on the altar of our common country. This is done regardless of the fact that the most of the noise making patriots do not know whether the Fourth of July commemorates the Revolutionary War, the Discovery of America, the Chicago Fire, the Burning of Rome, or the Return of the Round the World Flyers. And the less they know the more noise they make. Many efforts have been made to turn the frantic patriotism of this day harmlessly off in the direction of picnics, ice cream cones, hot dogs, and other less painful methods of commemorating our natal day than by blowing ourselves up, but it is still advisable for those whose motto is Safety First to repair at early dawn to the storm cave.

FOR A FAVORITE POET.

Down in the warm green vale below I watch a snowy flock;
Mine is the task to tend the little dreams of life and love,
And yours to hunt the dream beyond all dreams, whose gleamings mock
With their elusiveness the eyes of men who glimpse and lose.

You are a brother to the unshorn winds, to clouds and stars;
And I am near to quiet streams, to clover blooms and loam;
I walk the paths that lead across the fields and through the glades,
While you of the intrepid heart serenely climb to roam
The breathless slopes, the ranges that aspire to the sun.

And I can never climb those far and alien heights with you;
But with my eyes I follow you, rejoicing that you go

ADELAIDE LOVE.

WE ARE INFORMED that the amiable George Gaw, Chicago's new official greeter to all the great and near great who visit our city, will wear a white suit, ride in a white automobile, and be escorted by two cops on white motorcycles. We trust George refuses to act on the malicious suggestion that will probably be offered by New York newspapers that when appearing in behalf of our fair city he also carry a bucket of whitewash.

THERE'S ALWAYS something in the news to make the most despondent person resolve to cheer up and keep on living. For why should any one reach for the arsenic or hunt around for a rope when life offers such cheery hopes as revealed in the fashion notes from Paris yesterday? "The décolletés for formal evening ensemble are ultra-modest in front, dwindle to a mere necklace that hugs the neck closely, and leaves the shoulders and back bare to the waistline." Why one wants to end it all with this sort of thing going on, or rather coming off, we simply can't say.

HANK says the crickets have been chirping in his garden so loudly the last few nights he couldn't get any sleep. And that when a cricket chirps, or whatever noise a cricket makes when he rubs his hind legs together, it is a sure sign of frost in six weeks. What, six weeks! And summer just got here.

THE ONLY FLY in the ointment used in welcoming the Messrs. Post and Gatty, the distinguished around the world flyers, is that there doesn't seem the slightest chance of a pair of dazzling romances with both heroes marrying heiresses, or at least gals whose names are in the social register, both flyers being already and quite happily married. This is really a great disappointment and there should be some kind of law passed right away requiring around the world flyers to be bachelors. Write to your congressman today.

AND UPON THIS gladsome Fourth of July we shall learn after a glance at the front page whether Mr. Stribling succeeded in walloping Mr. Schmeling or vice versa, and whether or not Mr. Mellon won the decision over France in the great debt moratorium battle. But whatever occurs we shall struggle not to let it spoil our Fourth.

THE STOCK MARKET shot sweetly and happily up yesterday on the faint hope that France grudgingly gave out that she was thinking kindly of the suggestion to sign the debt moratorium. ANOTHER COUNTRY BOY WHO MADE GOOD

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

JULY 4, 1915.

NEW YORK.—Frank Holt, a crack brained teacher of languages, until recently with Cornell university, obsessed with the idea that God had appointed him to stop the shipment of war supplies to the allies, tried to murder J. P. Morgan this morning after attempting on Friday night to wreck the capitol at Washington with a dynamite bomb. The New York and Washington police have information which leads them to believe that Holt planned next to go to Cornish, N. H., and attempt to take the life of President Wilson. Holt forced his way into Mr. Morgan's house on East Island, three and a half miles from Glen Cove, L. I., drove the butler before him with his revolver, searched the house until he found Mr. and Mrs. Morgan on the second floor, and then, as Mr. and Mrs. Morgan attempted to disarm him, fired two shots into Mr. Morgan's body.

Mr. Morgan is dangerously but probably not fatally wounded. He owes his life very likely to the courage and quickness of Mrs. Morgan, who, the first to detect Holt lurking in the shadows of the upper hallway, flung herself at the man and so disturbed his aim that he had no opportunity to shoot straight.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Officials of Washington tonight are endeavoring to prevent another such outrage as the attempt to blow up the senate wing of the capitol, which occurred last night. The number of guards around all public buildings have been greatly increased.

JULY 4, 1901.

CHICAGO.—This is the day of gore and glory. The first Fourth of July of the twentieth century is being greeted by pyrotechnical displays and noise. Thousands have fled to the country, leaving the small boy to blow up all he can. Strict enforcement of the mayor's order suppressing the sale of toy pistols lessened that form of celebration, but hospitals and firemen are prepared for a day of patriotic carnage.

CHICAGO.—The Lincoln park board organized by electing William W. Tracy president and Bryan Lathrop vice president.

NEW YORK.—This city gained slight relief from the heat by a rain, but the deaths caused by the hot wave were 188, with 300 prostrations. Philadelphia had fifty-nine deaths and Pittsburgh twenty.

JULY 4, 1881.

WASHINGTON, D. C. [1:45 a. m.]—There is a great solemnity about the White House; every voice is hushed; a crowd of waiting journalists and politicians moves about under the arched portico noiselessly. Col. Robert G. Ingersoll, to a group, spoke in a sad, low tone and said: "I knew the hand of death was laid upon him when I saw him yesterday. The hour is coming now. Too bad! Too bad! Poor Garfield—a miracle only can save him." A few seconds later Surgeon General Barnes came out. His face was solemn. He would only say: "The bulletin will soon be down. There is no important change." There was a sudden mysterious movement of the carriages of the cabinet and a shiver ran through the crowd at the whispered rumor, "He is dead." Secretary Blaine came out. His face was pale. His lips seemed, in the shadow of the struggling moonlight, almost to quiver. His voice was firm. He said: "There has been no material change since 10 o'clock. Of course it is critical." The doctors say it is "very critical; nothing imminent; signs of tympanites." But no man now says there is hope.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Guiteau sent for District Attorney Corthill and asked for an interview which lasted for three hours. The district attorney refuses to give to the press the story told by the prisoner, but says that he made a very full statement. He reiterated a statement contained in a published letter that his motive in shooting the President was to save the Republican party.

SUMMER CLOTHES FOR MEN.

Chicago, July 1.—Is there no man with sufficient initiative to design a more comfortable and utilitarian summer costume? For instance: Why not knickers made of linen hanging loosely around the legs, with lisle stockings, a loose blouse reaching down to the hips, short or long sleeves, and an open neck? But no. Fashion designers for men go to the extreme, with the result that the average man shies away from their innovations. I believe it was a year ago that some one paraded up and down the boulevard in what appeared to have been somewhat elongated shorts, a soft shirt, and bare legs. What man would wear clothes leaving the knees and legs bare? For one thing, knees are not beautiful, if you care to look at the matter in that way.

Some one will remark that perhaps their legs are spindly or overplump and for that reason would not care to have them exposed to view in knickers. But what of that? The world is fully aware of the fact [and most women also agree] that very few women have really beautiful legs; but does that prevent them from wearing short skirts? It does not. And since when does mere man aspire to beauty? A. C. S.

SOME GENTLEMAN NAMED BARRY.

Chicago, June 29.—When I was in Washington the other day I saw the mopument of a fat man with the caption "Commodore Barry, Founder of the American Navy."

I have known a Jimmie Barry, the prize fighter, and Barry McCormick, the baseball player. There was a Gen. Barry who conquered Cuba for the United States fifteen or twenty years ago, but a Barry in the American navy I never heard of. Don't they mean Swiss navy? MACCARTIE.

GOLFING IN THE PARK.

Chicago, June 30.—Replying to a communication published in your paper June 29, complaining of unfairness at the starting tee of the Columbus park golf course:

The present West Chicago park commissioners inaugurated a "first come first served" policy at the park golf courses. This is rigidly adhered to and no reservations or exceptions of any kind are permitted. The complaint in question is being thoroughly investigated.

Any complaints in the future should be reported to the offices of the commissioners in Garfield park. All employés are under civil service rules and to trial before the civil service commission and dismissal from service if evidence of unfairness is presented.

W. R. JAMES,
President, West Chicago Park Commissioners.

OFFICIOUS LIFE GUARDS.

Chicago, June 29.—The minute one steps into the water, ankle deep or otherwise, he or she starts getting orders from the life guards and never stops getting them until, disgusted, they give up and decide that the beach is no place to have a good time.

Life guards, most of whom are worthless in a real danger, strut and stand around dividing their time between pestering bathers who are in no danger on the one hand and showing their muscles to unsophisticated females on the other hand.

If the owners of the property adjacent to beaches want to keep the public away why not call in the National Guard? Little doubt they would be accommodated. PHILIP MCCUTCHEON.

SYNOPSIS.

Clare, young daughter of Iris de Bertincourt, is kidnaped and held for ransom. Iris has been separated for years from her dissolute husband, Marcel. They are cousins and possible heirs of their tyrannical aunt, the Comtesse de Castelmauroux. Iris planned to divorce Marcel and marry Maj. Alan Charnwood. After a long and dangerous search Charnwood and his friend, Tommy Rostetter, a journalist, find out that it was Clare's aunt who instigated the kidnaping, with a pair of criminals, Yetta and Pietro, the actual abductors, the motive being the monetary reward. Alan and Tommy engage in a battle with Marcel and his partners in crime in a deserted quarry near their hideout just as they are about to do away with a boy known as the half witted son of the couple to prevent his disclosing information detrimental to them. Marcel is killed. The couple escape. The supposed boy is rescued and discovered to be Clare, who is in a state of exhaustion. She is taken to the infirmary of a local physician. Iris arrives. She desires to keep Clare from learning her father's part in her kidnaping. Tommy gives out the story that Marcel was killed trying to rescue his daughter. Clare improves rapidly, and Alan persuades Iris to marry him immediately.

INSTALLMENT LXVI.

THE LAST MYSTERY CLEARED.

Clare began at the moment when the Webers' car set her down at the gate, which she had opened at once, standing just between the two pillars.

"Yvonne was teasing me about the way I spoke my lines," she declared. "She said I was trying to say them like a—an actor at the Odéon whom we were all rather wild about—some one who plays the son in 'L'Arlésienne'—you know, we went together." Over her head Iris darted an understanding glance at Charnwood, who nodded quietly. "I told her she was a silly cuckoo, and that if she hadn't been mooning about him herself she wouldn't have left out a whole speech and lost me my cue. Madame Weber laughed at us both, a big, jolly laugh, and advised me to get indoors quickly, as I had on a thin coat. I thanked her for having me to dinner and so on, and the car started off, with me still in the gateway, waving and calling out gaily. And then. . . ."

She paused with darkened eyes. Iris held her breath.

"I had not yet turned 'round, the car was actually in sight, when I felt a heavy hand on my shoulder and jumped as though I'd been shot. There, close beside me, was a fat, white haired old woman, dressed like a sort of nun, all in black. There was a linen band 'round her forehead, and dangling on her breast was a silver crucifix, exactly like the one Tante Victoire kept in a cabinet. I knew that sort of cross well; and at the same instant, while I was wondering if this was one of the Sisters from across the street, I vaguely connected her with Tante Victoire. You know how one's mind works. . . ."

"Yes, go on, dear! What did she say?"

"She put her finger to her lips and whispered, 'S'sh! Don't speak! Come quickly outside with me; I have a message from your great-aunt!' Her manner was so urgent and grave my heart jumped into my mouth. Before I could answer she pushed me through the gate, which swung to behind us, saying in a low, rapid voice: 'The Comtesse de Castelmauroux has sent me here to keep you from going indoors. If you so much as pass the threshold of your house you will be in quarantine. Your poor mother has been suddenly taken ill with'—what do you think, mummy?—' with petite verole.'"

"Smallpox!" gasped Iris, startled.

"Yes, smallpox. I almost sank through the pavement. I'd have cried out, but she put her hand over my mouth, 'Careful,' she warned, 'there is a nurse looking out for you.' I was so stunned I never even noticed how all the time she was hurrying me along in the shadow of the wall. I kept thinking of your sore throat and the headache you'd had, and saying, 'Poor, poor mummy! So it was this terrible disease coming on and I never knew!' I recalled that sometimes people died of smallpox. O, it was dreadful!"

"And you quite believed her?"

"Of course. I heard her explain that you'd been carried off to the isolation hospital, but that Tante Victoire wouldn't allow me to be quarantined, and was going to rush me down to the château till the danger was over. Nightmare that it was, the whole thing seemed somehow reasonable.

"As we turned the corner, running, I asked if daddy knew. 'Yes, yes,' she whispered. 'He himself is driving you down to the country.' So that part seemed all right."

"In the Rue Guillaume d'Orange was a shabby looking car with the top drawn up. I stared at it. 'But that's not daddy's,' I said, 'not my aunt's, either. Who is—?' I didn't get any further. Something like a warm pincushion struck me over the mouth. It was the woman's fat hand. At the same moment a man with a handkerchief tied 'round his face leaned out of the front seat to draw me inside and a needle of some sort jabbed me in the arm, here. I struggled and fought, but everything was growing black and my strength went. I felt the two of them drag me inside the car and bundle me into a rug, and that's all I know."

Charnwood and Iris gazed at each other dumbfounded. How simple, how appallingly obvious! Of all conceivable pretexts, there was not one which could have served so perfectly as this, yet no person connected with the search had even remotely thought of it. Again De Betincourt's diabolical cunning.

With what speed he must have set to work! Recognizing his coveted opportunity, he had at once notified his agents, purchasing the flowers by means of which Lepin was able to introduce Warshavsky into the garden, supplied the latter with a disguise calculated to disarm suspicion, and, having everything in their hands, taken himself out of Paris. The crucifix, an important item, was probably borrowed from the comtesse's collection, while the wig, his own property, served to hide the woman's incriminating hair. A black domino would have sufficed to simulate the nun's garb; in the darkness anything of that sort would pass muster.

"And is that all, absolutely all, you remember?"

Iris was afraid to venture the question, so beset was she by dread lest some portion of subsequent horrors had registered on the girl's memory.

Clare did not immediately reply. She lay with closed eyes, thinking, while tears of weakness crept from between her lashes and lay upon her cheeks. The listeners hung upon her coming words.

"That's all," she answered, at last. "Sometimes I get a vague impression of shapes and sounds; I keep feeling I want to brush something away . . . but there's nothing I can get hold of. But, no, there is just one thing. I seem to recall, on several occasions, half rousing, hot and terribly thirsty. Some one, I don't know who, gave me water and I drank simply gallons. I suppose the water was drugged, wasn't it? If I ate anything I don't know. The whole thing was like one long, dark, feverish night, and when I came to and found you bending over me it was as if I'd come out from under an anesthetic."

Iris relaxed. So all Clare had passed through, even the fall over the cliffs and the final scenes, during which her life hung by a thread, remained safely buried in her subconsciousness. Only frequent doses of a drug which affected her peculiarly could have induced this result. Now she need know only what they chose to tell her, and that little had been carefully prepared.

Her father's fictitious heroism she had already met halfway, with a touching faith in his cleverness and courage, but she had not yet learned the part Alan Charnwood had played, and listened now spellbound to her father's edited version. At the end she uttered a cry and turned a wondering gaze on her deliverer.

"You, too! I never guessed that!"

With brimming eyes she stretched out an impulsive hand to touch his own. The gesture sealed the compact between them.

"But how," she asked, after a pause, "did those creatures get to know about me, and how did they hit upon that night of all others?"

"We can only think," replied Iris, promptly, "that on the way to Tante Victoire's you were heard discussing your plans with Mathilde."

Clare pondered this and nodded.

"When we got into the bus at Montparnasse there was a big crowd of rather rough looking people," she declared, her eyes vivid with recollection. "It must have been then, for we were talking things over, I remember, that"

"And I, too, mademoiselle," came a voice from the doorway. It was Mathilde herself, coming to remove the tea tray. With an impressive air she added: "For that matter, I can tell you something you probably don't know. When we alighted to go to your aunt's a fat, red haired woman got down too and kept close behind us all the way. I noticed her particularly because inside the bus she seemed to be listening."

Iris examined the maid's inscrutable face closely. Did Mathilde guess the truth they were trying to conceal and was this a voluntary contribution to their conspiracy of deceit? Whether it was or not, Iris breathed a deep sigh of thankfulness, as though she had crossed a tottering bridge over a chasm.

Good morning!

With reason! "The Man in Possession"—adapted from the stage play—is a clever and amusing number, with its title rôle, so to speak, built to order for the bookoo Mr. Montgomery.

Do you know who a "man in possession" is? Having just learned myself, I can tell you. It's a custom in England—where this story is laid—to install a sheriff's man in the home of a person who cannot or will not pay his debts, until the obligations are settled. He is called "the man in possession" and is supposed to be a gentlemanly fellow, not above "assisting in light domestic tasks." In no way is he to offend. He is just to stick around in a nice way and keep his weather eye peeled.

For reasons regarding which I shall not inform you, we discover Mr. Raymond Dabney entering the home of his brother's supposedly wealthy fiancée as a "man in possession." Events attendant upon his advent, and his folks' discovery that their black sheep is baa-ing in this particular pasture, form the narrative's pith.

The tale is lightly and adeptly delineated by (as you have probably noted) a cast of no mean ability. Irene Purcell gives a highly intelligent performances as the beset fiancée. Mrs. Weatherby, Beryl Mercer and C. Aubrey Smith are delightful as the elder Dabneys. Reginald Owens plays the sniffy and persnickety brother to good effect, while Charlotte Greenwood, all legs, arms, and mouth as usual, is a scream as Mrs. W's maid. Direction is adroit and the film, technically, most pleasing.

As for Mr. Montgomery—GIRLS!

Chicago Presbyterians Aid Discoveries in Palestine

JERUSALEM, July 3.—(AP)—Interesting discoveries have been made in an ancient city, showing evidence of having been abandoned at some period before the Christian era after alternate Greek and Jewish occupation, in the vicinity of Beth Zur, near Hebron.

The excavations were carried out under the auspicies of Dr. W. F. Albright and Prof. Sellers on behalf of the Chicago Presbyterian Theological seminary and the American School of Oriental Research.

The scientists unearthed numerous coins bearing the name of Antiochus and pottery including a rhodia jar with handles.

Harvard Party to Study Shooting Stars in Arizona

Flagstaff, Ariz., July 3.—(AP)—Lowell observatory scientists said today meteor showers, commonly called "shooting stars," will be studied thoroughly at two points in northern Arizona during a survey by Dr. Harbow Shapley, director of Harvard observatory, who will bring a party into this section soon. The study will continue 15 months and will supply data of the speed, altitude and size of the flaming particles of comets. Visibility of "the shooting stars" is said to be better in Arizona than elsewhere.

Movie Gossip from Hollywood

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., July 3.—[Special.]—Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne, the New York Theater guild couple who are making "The Guardsman" at M. G. M., have something special in the way of Hollywood actors' contracts.

Before Lunt and his wife would agree to come west they made the studio agree to accept the regular theater guild contract in their case. Under this document, the only such contract known to the writer to have been okayed by movie magnates, the studio is bound to protect Lunt and Miss Fontanne against [1] interviewers from magazines and newspapers; [2] advertising tieups such as many other movie celebrities rejoice in, because it means free publication of their physiognomies in the big American weeklies and monthlies [even if in the ad pages]; and [3] no requests to pose for pictures around the studio, for their employers' use in securing publicity for the release of the film they are making.

Mr. Lunt and Miss Fontanne provide the most rarified example of the aloof tendency that has been taking hold of motion picture actors and actresses and changing things from the "old days" of the silent films, when actors, actresses and directors were much more "homey" and infoqmal in making friends, and in permitting visitors to watch them do their work on the sets. The new school of what might be called the "bar every one off the sets—I refuse to talk to any one" actors and actresses achieved its first success and set a powerful example when Ronald Colman, Corinne Griffith, and Greta Garbo voiced such opinions and made them stick.

In this, they are innocent participants with Greta Garbo in giving the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot its big puzzle of the year: why should high priced acting stars always talk about wanting to quit the movies and retire to a Swedish farm, like Greta, Miss Fontanne, and Lunt do?

Bert Lahr has just arrived to make "Flying High," the show in which he just closed in Chicago, for the movies. In the interval before work starts, Lahr is doing what he calls "testing" all the southern California golf courses. His director-to-be, Charles "Chuck" Reisner, is participating in the course testing. It's a good way for directors and stars who are going to go through tribulations together to learn each other's peccadilloes in advance.

Knute Rockne's widow receives a share in the proceeds from the film, "Spirit of Notre Dame," which Universal starts on July 20. Three of the Four Horsemen, Stuhldreher, Crowley, and Miller; Carideo, Adam Walsh, Law, McMannon, Chevigny, Moon Mullins, Voedisch, and other Notre Dame stars of the last five years are to take part, although Lew Ayres, himself a University of Arizona athlete, is cast for the leading rôle. My information is that the Notre Dame players will not receive pay for their parts, although of course their expenses to Hollywood and other incidentals will be paid. Father Charles O'Donnell, head of the university, has read the script and, according to a studio announcement, has approved it.

Joel McCrea, one of the young crop of stars who skyrocketed to talkie success in the last nine months, has been signed to a new one year contract at RKO.

Toy Fashions Changing with Comic Strip Ideas

New York, July 3.—(AP)—There is style in toys that changes as rapidly as styles in women's clothing, Joseph Schmidt, German toy manufacturer, said today on his arrival here, and he added that comic strips are largely responsible.

"There was a time," Mr. Schmidt said, as the liner Albert Ballin sailed up the bay, "when we felt the toys of our grandparents would be toys of children for years to come, but that is no longer true. It is not long before these comic characters become third dimensional toys of the nursery."

Charlie Chan Party for Next Thursday; Learn Names Sunday

BY SALLY JOY BROWN.

All the Charlie Chan winners have been selected for our party on next Thursday and they may expect to find their names in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE. We look forward to this day with great anticipation, for the show is to be a dandy one—an exciting picture called "The Black Camel," brimful of mysterious happenings and interesting unravelings, an unusual stage production with Frankie Nasters and his boys heading the cast of a review, "Sea Breezes," and in addition there will be singers, dancers and comedians.

To celebrate the Fourth of July holiday week, Balaban & Katz promise an additional musical feature which should be extremely interesting. It is called "If Washington Were Here Today." That's something to contemplate, isn't it?

My only regret is that I can't invite all of you who wrote such splendid letters, but you have the encouragement, if you didn't win, that there will be many more grand parties—the next one to be announced Sunday. Don't miss THE TRIBUNE tomorrow. It contains good news for you whether you are a Charlie Chan winner or not.

Prince of Wales Calls London World Brain Center

LONDON, July 3.—(AP)—The prince of Wales opened the congress of universities of the empire today with the declaration that London had long been the financial clearing house of the world, "but today she can claim to be the educational clearing house, if not of the world, then of a very considerable part."

A century ago, the prince added, the British empire had only eight universities. Seventy are represented at the present congress.

"One difficulty," the prince remarked, "is how can a young man who intends to devote himself to commerce find time for university training?" The difficulty, he hoped, was not insuperable, because the more he traveled the more convinced he became that the best brains were required in finance, commerce, and industry.

Over 300 Yankees at Summer School of University of Mexico

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MEXICO CITY, July 3.—The summer school at the National University of Mexico opened today with an attendance of more than 300 students from all parts of the United States, representing every state in the American Union with the exception of Oklahoma. The plans for a party of about 20, headed by Prof. Tod Downing from the University of Oklahoma, was canceled at the last moment owing to the recent shooting in that state of a relative of President Rubio.

More than 24 of the students, who had intended to go to summer schools in Spain, have come to Mexico because of the revolutionary activities in Spain.

The dean of the university, Dr. Julio Jimenez Rueda, in addressing the American students this morning, called their attention to the fact that in the 11 years of the existence of the summer school at the Mexican National university the number of students from the United States had progressively increased.

'SAMSON ET DALILA,' AS SUNG AT RAVINIA, STARS JULIA CLAUSSEN

BY EDWARD MOORE.

"Samson et Dalila," that blend of gravely scored oratorio and symphony from the pen of Saint-Saëns which happened to turn out in the form of an opera, was the attraction presented by the Ravinia Opera company on the eve of the national holiday.

It is a work that repays the careful preparation and eager performance which is the rule at Ravinia, and this though the circumstances of presentation sometimes present not altogether unhumorous aspects. For example, it is a primary rule of operatic presentation that operas must if possible be sung in their original language, if only for the puzzlement of those who come to hear them. So "Samson et Dalila" on this occasion was sung in French and there was exactly one French singer in the cast. That one was Leon Rothier, in the rôle of the old Hebrew, and here and elsewhere a fine artist.

Not that the other artists were not easy and able in the French language, if that meant anything to most of the audience. What meant more, and should have meant more, was that some great singers appeared, and notably Julia Claussen as Dalila, an artist with the voice, the dignity, and the fine traditions of the old school, although she is by no means of the years that classify her in that school. Hers is a matured, a ripened presentation which, following the conventions though it may, yet has something stimulating and exhilarating about it.

Giovanni Martinelli as Samson was not quite at the top of his form, but at the same time his resonant voice reacted with high favor to the martial strains of the first act as to the amorous phrases of the second and the tragic despair of the third. Giuseppe Danise was the high priest, one of the finest artists of the present generation in the rôle. These and others did their parts fervently and sincerely, which fact, however, did not stand in the way of the chorus becoming a stellar organization on its own behalf.

Kids Will Have a Real Fourth at Algonquin

Seventy-six More Go to Camp There.

Seventy-six children who live in the Stock Yards neighborhood set out joyously on a two months adventure yesterday. There wasn't a parent, older brother or sister along. Right into a special coach of a Chicago and North Western train they piled, importantly carrying suitcases and bundles of clothing to last them through their vacation at Camp Algonquin.

"Tomorrow's the Fourth," excitedly commented Jimmie as he flung himself into a red plush seat that already held two other ten year olds. "You know what I heard they're gonna do? Treat us to real fireworks, the kind that ain't just firecrackers, but make pictures in the sky."

The rumor was a well founded one, Mrs. Astrid Save, camp superintendent smilingly informed her latest guests as they scrambled out of the trucks last evening just at supper time. There is to be a real Fourth of July celebration at Camp Algonquin, thanks to the generosity of the Thearle-Duffield Fireworks company. For years this company has furnished the grand fireworks spectacles for the youngsters and mothers of the city streets, and the event, coupled with the holiday spirit of the Fourth, is one of the most anticipated during the whole summer program.

"Just at dusk the 500 vacationists and counselors will go down to the open lawn by the river," Mrs. Save said, explaining the plans for the celebration. "The fireworks will be shot out over the water. There will also be the singing of old familiar songs by every one, a parade, and stunts."

The children who arrived at camp yesterday for the summer are pale and undernourished, but by the time they go back to their homes in August their cheeks will be full and rosy instead of thin and sallow, their eyes will be bright rather than dull and listless, and their parents will wonder how on earth so much energy and so many pounds could be accumulated in two short months.

This group is chosen as the most needful of rest and diet, from the children of the stock yards district of the United Charities. They will be under the constant surveilance of nurses, dieticians and recreation workers.

Ice fund contributors continued to be generous yesterday although the day's total of gifts was far below that of Thursday. Among the checks was one for $2.00, the proceeds of a circus given by Richard Neukranz and Knox Bettinghaus of Wilmette, each 10 years old.

Tells of Newer Way to Treat Tuberculosis

Progress in the treatment of pulmonary tuberculosis by use of the "direct method" perfected some time ago was reported yesterday by Dr. J. J. Mendelsohn. He spoke before the final session of the Chicago Medical society post-graduate clinics at the Cook county hospital.

The direct treatment consists of immobilizing the lung affected so that it is not used in breathing and thus gains a complete rest. The immobilization is obtained most simply by injecting air into the pleural cavity and collapsing the affected lung. Other methods are severing of the phrenic nerve on the affected side to paralyze the diaphragm and removal of rib sections on the same side.

Dr. Mendelsohn predicted that injection of air, since it is a temporary measure, probably will be the most widely used. The new method will be in universal use within ten years, he declared.

Millions of dollars will be cut from the annual cost of medical care, and patients will be returned to their homes and occupations months sooner through wider use of this method, the lecturer said.

"Up to now, direct treatment has been used chiefly in advanced and so-called hopeless cases of tuberculosis," Dr. Mendelsohn declared. "In cases of that type, it has proved three or four times as effective as the ordinary indirect treatment, that of rest and dieting. This result, and our early experiments with milder cases, indicate that the direct treatment will prove just as advantageous in any case of pulmonary tuberculosis.

"The new technique will not eliminate the indirect treatment now in use which consists of rest for the patient and dieting in an effort to build up general health."

The physician predicted that the tuberculosis sanitarium of the future will be of the skyscraper type instead of the low rambling institution of today.

Child's Water Sports Need Vigilant Eye of the Wise Grown-Up

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

I don't wonder that sculptors who are planning fountains always have little children or young, slender boy or girl figures as part of the design. Children and water seem to belong together. Children have a real craving to be close to the earth and in the water. I feel sorry for the child whose parents have taken a place in the country where there is no water—whether it be a brook, a pond, or the sea.

This is, however, beside the point. What I started to talk about was a continuation of the subject of summer care of children. One pet summer activity of children which needs a wary parent's eye has not been mentioned. That is swimming.

For children who know how to swim the water has an irresistible fascination. Left to their own devices boys and girls will practically live in it. The fact that they are cool and act so wild and exhilarated while swimming makes many parents less vigilant about this than they are about other forms of exertion. I've seen children with lips deep purple from the cold, go in again and again—and others chilled "to the very marrow," so cold that they need immediate attention, get so from lack of supervision.

Swimming is strenuous exercise, is tiring and certainly does keep children thin, especially in fresh water. We need to exercise some discretion in the matter and particularly at the beginning of the season when their swimming muscles are soft—before they have worked up any endurance we should insist that their swims be short and only once a day, at first.

Spending my summers among a group of swimming mad and water crazy children of all ages I know these things I suggest are not easy, but—as an old southern friend of mine said this morning:

"You can't expect to get to heaven

EMBARRASSING MOMENTS

Cookie Distribution.

The other day the laundry man came in to call for the laundry and Rex happened to come in with him. I turned to Rex and said, "Want a cookie, honey?"

"Don't mind if I do," exclaimed the laundry man in surprise.

When he realized that I was talking to the dog I don't know which of us was the more embarrassed.

Bare Legs and Socks All Right for Kids, but Look Out, Elders!

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

What do you think of these big little girls running around the streets with ankle length socks on?

Maybe I'm due for the mothball chest in the attic, but I don't like 'em. I say if you have a good ankle, why clutter it with sock material? And if you haven't a good un—why call the world's attention?

I haven't noted that the fad has struck the big town streets—yet. But it's one of the season's things Suburbia has to stand for. 'Taint that a nude leg is anything to write the chief of police about. Not any more, 'taint! But it's ugly worn with a shoe, or an abbreviated sock. For bathing suit, all right. But one Sunday a. m. [no, they don't recognize the sabbath] a woman was skidding down the street ahead of me wearing a good looking summer street frock, her feet clad only to the ankle rim and there banded and striped. She wasn't 16, or double it.

A friend of mine says: "Who are they doing it for? The men don't like it. I heard them panning the style last night!"

So, maybe it's true that the gals don't dress for men. Not the sector referred to, anyway.

But with the wide open meshed stockings that are available this season, surely that skin exposure ought to content the most avid sun fan. As a matter of fast, bare legs as a feature of decoration — with street clothes, I mean—just never will be decorations until some one thinks up cute scenes to paint on them, or evolves some fetching color scheme in water colors for their benefit. Until such time they're just legs that ought to be kept behind a mesh or a thread of chiffon.

But, as I say, I may be just too old fashioned and blinders are what I need, but I don't like 'em, do you?

BEAUTY ANSWERS

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

M. K.: IT IS DIFFICULT TO REduce the bust, as the exercises must be done faithfully and strenuously to be effective. It is possible, but you must be persistent. Rowing, bag punching, and swinging Indian clubs are among the exercises recommended.

K. L.: TO REMOVE FRUIT AND vegetable stains, use lemon juice or tomato juice. Cigaret stains require powdered pumice mixed with peroxide.

BY DORIS BLAKE.

"I should like your advice regarding the manner in which a newly wedded wife should conduct herself at parties. In order to make myself clearer, my wife and I have been married six months. Recently we attended a social affair. After we were there a short time, she danced with one young fellow for two hours.

"During intermission she sat beside him and left me to shift for myself. I don't expect to monopolize my wife's entire attention. But when I rebuked her for that evening's treatment, she said that we should mix with others and not look so married. She also remarked that this young man kissed her, and she thought nothing of it. RICHARD."

It looks, "Richard," as if you have a young lady on your hands who does need a bit of training in wifely behavior. So, according to the old instruction book, you'd better catch her young and bend the twig in the way you would have it grow. Not too dictatorially, of course, or she may balk. But—there are ways and ways of making these flighty young creatures realize that there's more to being married than flirting shamelessly with an outside gentleman and extending him the osculatory favors due the one who is paying her rent and buying her party gowns.

If she had a little more sense she'd realize her conduct is a reflection on her own judgment in picking a husband. That's what many of these flighty, silly wives do while they're indulging in the vanity of exciting other male attention. An open preference for another man is a slam at the husband. It can't be interpreted otherwise.

However, it may be just silliness. The sort that is found among a certain type of wives who want to advertise that they still can have any man they want. I don't like to advocate a like form of treatment for the girl on the next social occasion. It might help, though. Again, it might have disastrous consequence. But you know your girl. And knowing her, you can devise some form of treatment that will make her realize she is not going to make a laughing stock of you.

DORIS BLAKE ANSWERS

Dates Take Money.

"Dear Miss Blake: My friend invites me out only once every two weeks. Please enlighten me. "FLOSSY."

His position may not warrant his being serious with you.

Country Clubs to Celebrate; Golf, Fireworks

UNLESS the weather man has some mean tricks up his sleeve, society will devote this Fourth of July weekend to outdoor activities at the nearby country clubs and summer estates.

"Chicago colonists at Lake Geneva, Barrington, Wheaton, Lake Forest, and the other north shore villages will be hosts during the two days to hundreds of city dwellers, most of whom left last night for the country.

The smart country clubs, which always are popular holiday rendezvous, have planned programs to attract guests of all ages and tastes. The golf courses are reserved for masculine use today, but there will be plenty of entertainment that women and children may share.

Owentsia, for instance, has scheduled a sort of family party for this evening. At 7 o'clock there is to be a dinner for parents and children, and as soon as it's dark enough, there'll be a display of fireworks. When the fireworks are over, the youngsters will be sent home with their nurses and the older folks will remain to dance.

Hosts at the dinner will include Mr. and Mrs. Farwell Winston, Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Logan, with Mrs. Gilbert Porter, are to entertain a party of nine guests; Mrs. Lawrence Stidder, who has made reservations for five; Mrs. Cyrus H. Adams, who will have a party of eight; Mrs. Robert S. Hotz, who will be hostess to a group of five; Mrs. Charles H. Schweppe and Mrs. Alice R. Boswell, both of whom are to have parties of ten; Mrs. James Minotto, Mrs. Robert Hixon, Mrs. Lawrence D. Smith, and Edward Shumway, who will be joint hosts to a group of ten; Mrs. T. Philip Swift, Mrs. De Forest Hulburd, Mrs. Daniel R. Winter, Mrs. Frederic McLaughlin, Mrs. John F. Jelke Jr., Mrs. William Barry Jr., Mrs. A. A. Carpenter, Mrs. Randolph Owsley, and Mrs. Alexander H. Bovell Jr.

Father Hows of Plans with Patriotic Features.

Knollwood's activities for the day will have a suitable patriotic flavor. The commanding officers of Fort Sheridan, Great Lakes, and the sixth corps area will be guests of the club at luncheon and will officiate during the afternoon at the unveiling of the service men's plaque, on which is engraved the names of club members who served during the world war. On the golf course the men will play a 36 hole match for the Independence day trophy, an 18 hole Flag tournament, and a Service Men's contest.

In the evening there will be a dinner dance in the lovely outdoor pavilion. Some of the hosts include Col. and Mrs. George T. Buckingham, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander E. Patterson, Miss Sophia Harrington, Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Carr, Judge Clarence N. Goodwin, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Wilson, and Edward S. Wilson.

Exmoor is planning a family day, with a program of games for the children in the afternoon and a supper and fireworks in the evening. So as to take no chances on the weather, supper will be served indoors, but it's to be made as informal and picnicky as possible. After the fireworks there will be informal dancing. Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Peacock, Miss Josephine Bremner, Mr. and Mrs. George S. Bliss, Dr. and Mrs. Kellogg Speed, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Macfarlane, Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Willard, and Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Stevens.

The Chicago Golf club at Wheaton and Glenview Country club are also to have dinner dances this evening. Among the hosts at Glenview this evening will be Mrs. Chester H. Cook, Miss Mildred Wetten, Mrs. W. B. Johnson, Mrs. John Lee, Mrs. Harry A. Roe, Dr. Carl Davis, Mrs. Sidney S. Corbus, and Mrs. David Noyes.

Indian Hill held its annual holiday dance and midnight supper last night. Today there will be tennis tournaments for both children and adults, and the regular Fourth of July golf tournament for the men.

Vice President to Attend Arlington Races Today.

The only serious rival of the country clubs as a drawing card today is Arlington, which doubtless will attract a large quota of fashionable racing fans. Vice President Curtis, who is here as the house guest of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Lasker, and Mr. and Mrs. John D. Hertz, will be the Laskers' guests at luncheon today at the Post and Paddock club. This evening Mr. and Mrs. Lasker will give a large dinner at their Lake Forest residence for the Vice President and for Ambassador Charles G. Dawes. Samuel Insull, Thomas E. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Lee B. Strawn, and Milton Florsheim also will be hosts at Arlington today.

Allen B. Swift held a stag luncheon at Arlington yesterday for a group of contemporaries who meet often on the golf course. They included Thomas Miller, Harold N. Scott, Harry Bishop, Peter Berkey, Donald MacMurray, Paul Walker, Francis Blossom, E. C. Cobb, and Jack Viles.

Summer sojourners . . . Mrs. Frederick W. Keith of 237 East Delaware place and young Frederick are to depart on Monday for the Chicago club at Charlevoix, where they have a house for the summer. . . . Mrs. Daniel E. McCarthy and Miss Gertrude McCarthy of the Lake Shore Drive hotel are at the Marlborough-Blenheim at Atlantic City. . . . Mr. and Mrs. Miles Trammells will be guests over the week-end of Mrs. O'Neill Ryan at the Ryan summer place at Harbor Point. . . . Mr. and Mrs. Paget Cady are to depart on the 13th to spend ten days or two weeks at Palisades Park, Mich. . . . Mrs. William D. McIlvaine of 1100 Lake Shore drive, who is recuperating from a serious illness, has moved to the Deerpath inn in Lake Forest for the summer. . . . Mr. and Mrs. Orville Thompson are motoring to Michigan today to spend the week-end with the Ernest R. Grahams at their summer estate near New Buffalo.

These attractive booklets, just published, may now be obtained for 10 cents each, the three for 25 cents, at any Tribune public service office:

The foliage of roses needs protection from black spot, from the time the leaves are fully expanded until late fall. When attacked by this disease, a black spot appears on the leaf, then the leaf turns yellow and finally drops off.

"Black spot is caused by a fungus disease which winters on the old infested leaves of the previous season," according to Prof. M. F. Barrus of the New York College of Agriculture. "Raking and burning these leaves in the fall would help to control the disease, but this alone is not sufficient.

"Either Bordeaux mixture, lime sulphur solution, or sulphur dust is effective if several applications are made, continuing through the summer. If the season is rainy, five or six applications, or even more, may be needed to completely protect the foliage."

Bordeaux mixture is objectionable on account of the stain it leaves on the foliage. Lime sulphur does not stain the leaves so much, but sulphur dust is even less objectionable in this respect and is fully as effective in controlling black spot. A form of sulphur dust, stained green so it can scarcely be seen on the foliage, is also effective.

Food Talk

This is the season to talk about iced tea. There is no beverage more refreshing on a sweltering day. No liquid matches it for rescuing the heat tortured person.

Iced tea must be right. It is so easily made that many cooks give almost no thought to either the choice of tea or to its preparation. The quality of tea used is highly important. Any old tea is not tea. Black tea [fermented tea] or a semi-fermented tea is best. Green or the highly scented kinds like orange blossom and jasmine are not adapted to the making of a good everyday ice beverage. Choose a dependable brand. Once it is purchased take good care of it until the last leaf is used. Good tea is fragrant and should be stored in air tight containers.

Steeping the tea some cooks and writers would have us believe is as much a part of the divine afflatus as writing a poem or painting a picture. I do not hold that tea making is such a mysterious operation. True, it is not a job for rude or careless hands. But any of us can make a good cup of tea once we learn the principles, and they are not difficult to master. In the first place we deal with a substance whose highly fragrant and flavorful constituents are easily and rapidly extracted from the leaves, when they are in contact with water around the boiling point.

Therefore steeping should not continue too long. After three or four minutes of steeping the bitter substance in the tea, called tannin, is extracted. To make the best of iced tea one needs to obtain an infusion quickly and it needs to be strong because the ice will dilute it considerably. From one to one and a half teaspoons of good tea for each cup of boiling water used is sufficient to make a strong infusion.

Put the tea into a china, glass or porcelain pot or any other container made of these materials. Never use an iron pot, for iron gives tea an unpleasant flavor. Add the necessary amount of water that has just reached the boiling point. Water that actually boils for a few minutes produces a flat tasting tea because water that has all the gases expelled in boiling tastes flat. Avoid the use of water that has much iron or chlorine in it. This affects the flavor of the tea.

Water is so important that some of the large tea companies are cooperating with the consumer to the extent of supplying tea that is suited to the character of the waters of different sections. One reason the tea in England is so good is because the water contains no minerals or gas to spoil the flavor of tea. Another reason is the English housewife is careful to heat the water only to the boiling point—no longer—and then she buys the best of tea.

After pouring the water on the tea let stand for three or four minutes. Then strain into the ice filled tea glasses.

Brown and White Are Smart for Evening

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Last summer Paris had a universal recipe for style. It was "Take black and add white." This recipe was tested and approved by most fashionables, and many are adding to it this summer, too. Others have a new formula, which is "brown and white," and to these jaded eyes the new one is a mighty refreshing change. Just to date, brown and white are exclusive style companions, and are used by the smart world from morning till morning, but they haven't gotten to the woman in the street, as it were.

Particularly, brown and white for informal evening has a thrilling freshness, even in Paris, where the styles burn and die early. Mainbocher's brown and white printed evening pajamas for dancing and informal dinner are about the most distinguished ensembles to be found anywhere.

One of them is shown in the accompanying sketch. The dress, or I should say pajamas, is made of white crepe with a large leaf pattern outlined in brown all over it. This garment is one of the new two piece models, with a jumper blouse worn over a wildish pair of pajama trousers. They are flared by circular cutting below the hipline, which is flat and fitted.

The blouse has two short panels hanging from the shoulders in back, and is modestly high in front and daringly low cut in back, in the best Paris evening decolleté. A tailored belt of rose colored velvet with a rhinestone buckle gives a dash of contrast to the brown and white.

The straight jacket is made of white moire and has short cap sleeves, so it may be worn most of the time, indoors and out.

BOOKS

Hero of This Novel Defeats Own Purposes

"Ragged Banners" Tells of Proud Losers.

BY EDITH WEIGLE.

"RAGGED BANNERS," by Ethel Mannin [Knopf], is called a novel with an index. At the end of the book are tabulated alphabetically the ideas, places, and people discussed in the story. An unusual thought.

ETHEL MANNIN.

The dedication of this book gives a little of the strangeness and unique quality that permeates every page. Miss Mannin has written "Ragged Banners" for "the great legion of the valiant undefeatable defeated." By which, one takes it, she means all those people who give more to life than they receive; who are not classed with the successes, yet in failure seem, somehow, undefeated because of their gallant natures, because they keep their banners flying, no matter how torn they are by all the winds that blow.

To put it prosaically, the chief character, Anthony Starridge, is a square peg in a round hole. He is a gifted, brilliant young fellow whose talents are on the borderline of genius. There is something fatal about him: either he must be a genius or nothing at all. There is no halfway course for his life. Born in a dull, unhappy home in Bayswater, London, of a father of extremely small intelligence and a mother whose marriage has been a miserable frustration, Anthony's childhood could hardly be called normal.

He grew to be terrified of his mother and her hungry, watching eyes, which seemed to devour him body and soul. He started life off on the wrong foot, and the book is concerned with the devious paths he trod trying to find the right road, trying really, to find himself. The author speaks of him as "a lost soul . . . hovering on the boundary between genius and insanity . . . an introvert and a mystic."

Several friends try to bridge for him the gulf between the world of fantasy in which he lives and the world of reality, from which he shrinks in terror. Stephen Lattimer, with his keen, relentless intellect and his utter lack of emotion, helps Anthony for a time. So does Mary Thane, a quiet, tender woman who is always giving, never getting. So does the German Max with his healthy outlook on life, his love of gayety, his lack of introspection.

But each time, just as Anthony is about to come to grips with reality and become master of himself, a crisis occurs which drives him farther than ever away from normality. In the end, of course, a tragedy occurs, because whenever one is totally unable to make an adjustment with everyday living a tragedy is bound to happen.

"Ragged Banners" is the tale of a man who really never found himself; a man who might have been a second Shelley or Keats, but who could not coördinate his mental life with his outward existence. It is an interesting study, but its chief character seems more a creation of the mind than a flesh and blood person.

Miss Mannin writes well, at times with great beauty. Some parts of the novel might well be omitted, however, without any loss to the main theme. Her characters are first cousins to Aldous Huxley's in "Point and Counterpoint." Intriguing, all of them, but a bit unreal and unnatural to the average American reader.

"The Brownings," New Edition, Named for Actress

Roger Casement's Tragic Career Told in 'Traitor or Patriot?'

"Traitor or Patriot? The Life and Death of Sir Roger Casement," by Denis Gwynn (Cape-Smith), is the first biography of this dramatic figure in war and exploration. Casement was knighted by England for his exposure of barbarous conditions in the Congo and in Peru. Then, after becoming a world figure, he was executed for high treason in London as a result of his work in Germany in behalf of his native Ireland during the world war.

But, as Bernard Shaw is quoted in his book in referring to Casement: "No wise man now uses the word traitor at all. He who fights for the independence of his country may be an ignorant and disastrous fool, but he is not a traitor and will never be regarded as one by his fellow countrymen."

Sir Roger's career was as tragic as it was sensational. The author shows that he was distrusted in Ireland, regarded as a spy in Germany, and executed as a traitor in England. And yet he sacrificed his own life when he realized that the Germans would give no real support to a rebellion in Ireland.

"The Story of Science" Puts Layman Into Touch with Marvels

"The Story of Science," by David Dietz [Sears], covers in one volume the four fields of astronomy, geology, physics and chemistry and biology. The author is an authority on modern science and while his book is written in a popular vein, thus making a technical subject understandable to the average layman, it is scientifically accurate.

With a minimum of history, the book is almost entirely devoted to the latest facts and theories and their clear, untechnical presentation. Among the many subjects discussed is Einstein's theory, which is simply told and explained.

"The Story of Science" makes an informal and fascinating textbook for the person who wants to know more about the world in which he lives and forces that rule it. E. W.

Science Plays Large Role in Books for Child

BY AGATHA L. SHEA.

"Jane's Island," by M. J. Allee. [Houghton Mifflin]
"Nature Rambles," by Oliver P. Medsger. [Warne.]
"The Astonishing Ant," by Julie Kenly. [Appleton.]

Among the recent new books for young people suggesting a variety of subjects for summer reading are Ann A. Morris' "Digging in Yucatan," Ethel Brill's "Rupahu's Warning," and Marjorie Allee's "Jane's Island."

The first is the story of an archeological expedition sent by the Carnegie institute to excavate the lost city of Chichen Itza, written by the wife of a scientist who accompanied him on the expedition. The material in itself is fascinating and the descriptions of the discoveries would have an appeal for any young reader whose tastes run in this direction, were those discoveries presented in more readable style.

The author, however, has not made the most of her material for the long written down chapters on archaeology which mark the beginning of the book will discourage many young folks for whom the subject has an attraction. Even the stories of the discoveries themselves which might have been a real contribution are almost spoiled by the interpolations of the imaginary scenes of long ago which she has introduced in connection with them.

For the Indian story devotee Ethel Brill's "Rupahu's Warning" is an unusually interesting tale. Based on historical facts relating to the Sioux outbreak, it tells the story of Rupahu, an Indian boy who because of his loyalty and friendship for them saves a white family from the uprising and enables them to reach the fort, a kindness later reciprocated by the white boy. Marjorie Allee's "Jane's Island" is a story which girls of the 'teen age group will enjoy if they like to read of summer adventures. Jane is a 12 year old daughter of a biologist and spends her summer with the family on Cape Cod while her father carries on his experiments in a famous marine laboratory there.

She is an impetuous, reckless child whose parents engage a companion for her in the person of Ellen McNeil, a 17 year old freshman from the University of Chicago whose business it is to save her charge from becoming too reckless in her wanderings on land and sea. The developments of the work at the laboratory play a large part in the story. Although well enough written, it does not equal in interest or literary value the author's "Susanna and Tristram," that fine tale of the Underground Railway and its times, which appeared a couple of years ago.

For children who are interested in nature and the little creatures who inhabit the fields and forests, there are two books of interest. "Nature Rambles," by Oliver P. Medsger, is a series of talks on birds, insects and highway flowers found in the spring in country walks. Julie C. Benly's "The Astonishing Ant" tells the life story of the ant, presenting it to the child as a member of a hard working community with problems and conflicts which it must overcome.

The author evidently knows her subject well and is successful in presenting those facts to children. It is unfortunate, however, that she adopted the device of having the reader imagine himself the size of the ant, as this introduction of the imaginative tends to detract from the value of the book as a fact book, and leaves one with the impression that she is writing down to the children.

Stella Benson's Novel Wins High British Rating

Harper & Bros. have received word from their London office that Stella Benson's "The Far Away Bride," published in England under the title, "Tobit Transplanted," has been chosen by the London P. E. N. club as the best representative British work of the last two years, under the new scheme whereby each of the corresponding clubs of the world makes similar national choices. The final selection from these of the best book of the year will be made by an international P. E. N. committee.

"SAVAGE MESSIAH" IS STRANGE STORY OF ART, LOVE, MISERY

BY FRANK SWINNERTON.

LONDON. — [Special Correspondence.]—The book that is now being talked about in London is "Savage Messiah," by H. S. Ede. This is not strictly a biography, but it is a picture of two lives, written with extraordinary simplicity and vividness.

The lives are those of Henri Gaudier, an artist of genius who was killed in action in 1915, during an attack on Neuville St. Vaast, and of Sophie Suzanne Brzeska, a Polish woman, very much his senior, who died insane seven years later.

The two had shared a strange life of emotion and starvation; they had an acquaintance with many of the leading artists in Paris and London; and much of "Savage Messiah" consists either of Gaudier's letters or of adaptations from Sophie Brzeska's diary. The result is electrifying; and there is an account of a short-lived friendship with Katherine Mansfield and Middleton Murry which so epitomises the conflict of character that it is as if the scenes passed before the reader's eyes.

Of Gaudier's genius there can be no question. Even the slightest drawings reproduced in the book are proof of it. But the interest of the book lies in its unusually candid and intimate picture of the conditions under which some works of genius are produced. The poverty, the misery, the incessant illness of this odd and ill-assorted couple are described with such truthfulness and such acceptance, and the childish delight of Gaudier in new friends and in patrons is so perfect, that the narrative holds one breathless. It is no wonder that the demand for such a book is wide and the gossip about it endless.

A novel of an unusual kind is offered to the public in "Ladybrook," by Eleanor Farjeon. Miss Farjeon's best known prose work has hitherto been her charming fairy book, "Martin Pippin in the Apple Orchard" [which was "discovered" some years ago by J. D. Beresford at the time when he was acting as literary adviser for a London firm of publishers]; but "Ladybrook" will spread her fame.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Toledo, O., July 3.—George von Elm, the Detroit blond who is neither professional nor amateur, but just a plain business man golfer, broke the spell of the Inverness club curse here today in the second 18 hole round of the Sixty-fifth United States open golf tournament. He did an amazing 69, two under par. This score, added to his 75 yesterday, gave him a two day total of 144 and the leadership in the list of 65 qualifiers for the 36 hole final tomorrow.

GEORGE VON ELM.

Von Elm, whose card today tied the competitive Inverness course record set jointly by Jock Hutchison of Chicago and Harold Weber of the home club, defeated Bobby Jones for the national amateur championship in 1930. He announced his intention of taking a business of golf at the conclusion of last year's amateur tournament, but is not recognized by the Professional Golfers' association. Making a business of the game, however, has been highly successful for him, and he finished second to Gene Sarazen among money winners last year.

Favorites Make Their Move.

Thus far this open has been one of the best in history. It was today that the favorites made what horse racing people call their move, but while some of the long shots dropped back, others clung to the pace with a surprising tenacity. One stroke back of Von Elm was Billy Burke of Greenwich, Conn., and Eddie Williams, the 41 year old Cleveland professional, who was tied for the lead at the end of the first round yesterday. Each has a 36 hole total of 145.

But came one veteran and three of the children long shots. They are Macdonald Smith of New York, Charlie Guest of Deal, N. J.; Guy Jones, 36 year old professional at the Orchard Ridge public fee course in Fort Wayne, Ind., and Herman Barron, Jewish professional from Port Chester, N. Y. All have cards of 146.

Hagen Shoots Another 74.

There are no 147's, but grouped at 148 is a quintet of professionals who are to be respected in any man's golf tournament. These include Walter Hagen, who repeated his yesterday's 74 after; Joe Turnesa of White Plains, N. Y.; Leo Diegel of Agua Caliente, Cal.; Johnny Farrell, who shot a 70 today, the second best round of the tournament, and Mortie Dutra, the other of the giant brothers from California.

A Chicagoland complexion remains, as Frank Walsh and Al Espinosa keep 149's. Harry Cooper is also in the running yet with a 151.

Among the sixty-three players who shot 158 or better for the two days' play to qualify are the following former golfers: Percy Allis, Wanssee, 153; Fred Robson of Great Britain, 155; Ernest Whitcomb, Great Britain, 154; Auguste Boyer, France; T. H. Davies, Great Britain, 156, and Ed Meisenbrook, Great Britain, 158.

Diegel Shoots Ace.

The tournament will be remembered as the second American open in which an ace in one was made. Leo Diegel did it on the 146 yard thirteenth hole, using a mashie to achieve the feat. Leo appeared distressed as soon as the ball had left the tee, apparently thinking he had hooked it. Instead the ball landed on the green and rolled in. The only other ace made in an American open tournament is credited to P. O. Hart of Cleveland, who dropped one on the 13th hole at Apawamis in 1922.

Von Elm's 69 was due largely to his deftness with his irons. It was composed of a 37 going out and a 32 coming home. There was nothing startling about his beginning, but he started on a birdie parade. He had only one poor hole and that was on the 8th, where he was caught in a trap. A heel print, which had

GALLANT KNIGHT FACES 16 FLEET HORSES TODAY

BY FRENCH LANE.

Gallant Knight, the western turf champion, has his work cut out for him today in the renewal of the Stars and Stripes handicap, which will be worth about $35,000 and will feature the Arlington Park holiday racing program.

The Knight, holder of numerous track records and master of all that have dared to line up at the barrier with him, finds himself today in a race against the most powerful competition he ever has faced. Sixteen other handicap stars, all the good ones in the country, with the exception of Questionnaire and Sun Beau, will endeavor to show him their flying heels.

Gallant Knight, first; A la Carte, second; The Nut, third. And he believes Silverdale will be charging home in fourth place.

Difficult Race to Pick.

Old Dr. Binoculars is a pretty conservative sort of a fellow, although he got a little reckless away back last April when he picked Gallant Knight to wind up as the handicap champion of the year in America.

Mike Hall, Valenciennes, Minotaur, Dowagiac, Satin Spar, Plucky Play, game little Joey Bibb, Caruso, Hot Toddy, Boys Howdy, Morpheus, and Morsel are in the struggle, and who except the famous surgeon of the turf, Dr. Binoculars, could diagnose such a puzzling case?

The Stars and Stripes, the greatest of all handicaps run in America this year, probably will be witnessed by the largest crowd that ever has visited the Arlington race course. The management was ready to accommodate 40,000.

Epithet Wins Omaha Purse.

While the crowd at Arlington yesterday awaited the running of the Stars and Stripes, Epithet, the only 2 year old last year that beat the champion Jamestown, returned to winning form. Showing his 2 year old speed and class rather unexpectedly, he won the Omaha purse, a dash at six furlongs. He won by four lengths from the speedy Martha Jones. Otto W. Lehmann's long shot, Maid of Honor, was third. Finishing out of the money in fourth place and never a contender came Outbound, the odds on choice.

Outbound was made a short priced choice because he had finished close up to Neverfade the other day when Neverfade tied the Arlington Park track record for six furlongs. But Outbound didn't run that sort of a race in the Omaha. He was away slowly and never menaced the leaders. Martha Jones and Maid of Honor fought for the lead all through the early stages and Martha headed into the stretch with enough advantage to indicate that she was going to win handily.

Epithet Overtakes Martha.

Epithet then showed his class. He bounded up from nowhere and by the time they were straightened out for the run home he was fighting it out with Martha Jones for the lead. He caught Martha a half furlong out.

MAX IS GREATLY IMPROVED; FIGHTS LIKE CHAMP NOW

BY HARVEY WOODRUFF.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Cleveland, O., July 3.—Whatever chance Young Stribling had of winning the heavyweight title from Max Schmeling tonight faded when he failed to launch an aggressive attack or to obtain a marked advantage in the first five rounds.

Probably it would have made no difference. It might even have hastened the end, which put the first knockout in Stribling's ring record of more than ten years.

The Schmeling who opposed Stribling was an entirely different Schmeling from the one who was buffeted around by Jack Sharkey at the time Max won the world title. He was cool and collected, as expected. But he was much harder to hit. In fact, even the clever boxer he opposed found him elusive and hard to hit behind that high guard which took off many blows aimed for the chin.

Can Strib Be Burned Out?

But what created the greatest surprise was the ease with which Max took whatever blows Stribling had to offer. Even before the Georgian began to fade in the seventh round and before he had slowed down until Max no longer feared him in the later stages, his blows lacked the former Stribling sting. One wondered if this young southerner has not burned himself out with his early stage work and ten years of ring battling.

On the other hand, Schmeling is a greatly improved boxer, despite the feeling that he might be ring rusty after a year's lay-off. He fought exactly as he planned, never deviating from his plan, and in my opinion, won by keeping up a constant pounding of Stribling's body which wore down the Georgian.

Body Attack Takes Early Toll.

That fixity of purpose in attack continued throughout. It was not so apparent to the crowd at first, but I noticed as early as the third round while Stribling was still leading on points, a red mark from heavy glove impacts was rising on Willie's left side. It evidently hurt Stribling as Max kept pumping these blows to the body at every opportunity. He often ripped up rights and lefts to the head during the infighting. It was these latter blows which started a red flow from Strib's nose in the fourth, cut his right eye in the seventh, and left him a somewhat gory sight at the finish.

While Max was being shaded in four of the first six rounds, he seemed anxious but not worried. Even then he was crowding in, according to his plan, to get to close quarters. As Schmeling felt his foe fading, which he no doubt sensed quicker than the crowd to whom it was apparent in the seventh session, he quickened his action and tried to speed up the fighting. Stribling had plenty of strength left, at that, to escape this crowding.

Schmeling Improved Each Round.

But whereas Stribling absolutely dominated the clinches at the start and was able to get close enough to pinion Schmeling's arms, Max, as the bout proceeded, was more successful in his pumping to the body, the basis of his attack, and in more and more frequently uppercuts from out of these clinches.

By the tenth round the result was clearly established except for a chance blow by Stribling. This was a remote possibility because Schmeling was getting better, working more strongly and more confidently, and varying his body tactics with lefts to the head and jaw and always his countering rights to the body. Stribling's blows had lost enough of their force so even when they landed full on the jaw or body, Max showed no distress or even annoyance, but just rushed back for more. His body attack now had taken its toll.

At one time in the eleventh, Strib-

A KNOCKOUT PUNCH THAT MISSED THE MARK

CUBS BRING REDS HOME FOR PAIR OF GAMES TODAY

BY EDWARD BURNS.

The Cubs and Cincinnati Reds arrived in Chicago on a special train yesterday afternoon. Both outfits were a bit bruised by eastern experiences, but prepared to put on two shows at Wrigley field today, one in the morning and one in the afternoon.

The dear old Reds, who knocked the Cubs out of the pennant last year, have been splendid pals of the Cubs so far this season, losing eight straight before Si Johnson finally stopped the Bruins for the one and only Cincy victory on May 28.

But the Reds are simply booked in to pick up some holiday sugar at the gate. They leave all too soon for pennant potentialities, and tomorrow the travel worn but highly ambitious Cardinals will arrive for one of those crucial series.

Bush, Root Hurl Today.

Manager Hornsby, however, will hold back nothing for the Cardinals. Today he will employ against the Reds Guy Bush, ranking pitcher of the National league, who has a record of six wins and one loss, and Charley Root, who has won six games while losing eight, the seventh and eighth losses falling on successive days earlier this week.

Bush is at the top of his form at present and there's nothing especially wrong with Root, except that he has been a little bit temperamental lately. When anything goes wrong, Charley becomes terribly upset. The penalty recently has been instantaneous and vicious action by enemy batsmen. But Root is a smart fellow and now that the Cubs are planning a big winning streak to put them at the top of the National league, like as not Charley will realize he only cuts off his nose

Bundle of Pittsburgh Cash Shifts Odds to Schmeling

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Cleveland, O., July 3.—The betting barometer on which thousands of dollars were posted on the result of tonight's bout between Champion Max Schmeling and Willie Stribling rose sharply this afternoon in favor of the title holder. When $25,000 of Pittsburgh cash at even money found no takers, the odds shifted to Schmeling for the first time. His manager, Joe Jacobs, said 6 to 5 was a fair price on the German.

The ringside section was a sea of white. The crowd wore white flannels, linen suits, sporty panamas. These and a $25 ticket were the sartorial requisites of admission to the stadium.

Mique Malloy, who almost put on a big heavyweight match in Chicago last summer, was one of the first Chicago arrivals. When asked why he arrived he refused to answer on advice of counsel. Mique was dressed for anything. He wore knickers, rubber boots and a dinner coat. He explained it was tricky weather and he was taking no chances on how it might break.

Both the police and the ushers handled the early arrivals admirably. There were occasional flareups as overheated enthusiasts fought for real or imaginary rights, but there were no casualties. Two disgruntled patrons who threatened to come to blows were asked to put on their match in the ring. But they felt fistic action would have been out of keeping with the occasion.

Mayor Anton J. Cermak arrived in Cleveland this afternoon with a party of Chicago officials to attend the bout. Former Gov. James Cox of Ohio was another prominent Democrat at the ringside.

A rumor that Al Capone, Chicago gang chief, was present reached the press row as the ringside began to fill. Capone was seen behind a large set of black whiskers, it was reported.

One of the last minute efforts to ballyhoo the fight was announcement of a $750,000 offer to Jack Dempsey to fight the winner in Cleveland next Christmas. It was, of course, the bunk. However, Dempsey or anybody else would be glad to work an hour or two for money like that.

Schmeling must be anxious to return home. A check up at the North German Lloyd Steamship lines revealed that the German had booked passage on the Europa. The liner will sail from New York for Bremen on Tuesday.

Chicagoans who had reservations for the fight included Gen. John V. Clinnin, president of the National Boxing association; George Getz, member Illinois boxing commission; Sheldon Clark, Vincent Bendix, and Patrick Joyce.

Gene Tunney, the last heavyweight champion, was guest tonight at dinner on the yacht of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Graham of Detroit. They went out to North Randall track this afternoon accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Walter P. Candler of Atlanta, Ga., the coca cola people. Mr. Candler's horses are trotting at North Randall.

Stribling's wife arrived late in the afternoon, but did not see the bout. She was of the opinion that Ma and Pa could look after her husband during his engagement with Schmeling.

In the WAKE of the NEWS

CLEVELAND, O., July 3.—[Special.]—Friend Stewart: Well, Stewart, Arch is here and he says I better not send any Wake for Saturday morning because you will be so crowded with fight news.

That suits me all right, because we've spent quite a little money down here and I sort of ought to be looking over the items and planning my expense account.

You know expense accounts always worry me.

If you happen to run across Mr. Deininger, our auditor, you might kind of sound him out and see whether any one ever has turned in a charge for "all else."

After I have itemized the various expenses, if I could put in a charge of about $20 for "all else," it would be a great convenience. See you Sunday. Regards. HARVEY T. WOODRUFF.

IT'S STRIBLING FOR 5 ROUNDS, THEN ALL MAX

Right to Jaw Ends Fight.

Cleveland, O., July 3.—Max Schmeling tonight proved his right to the heavyweight championship of the world by stopping Willie Stribling, ranking American heavyweight, in the fifteenth round of their title fight in the new municipal stadium tonight. Fourteen seconds remained to be fought when Schmeling smashed a terrific right to Strib's jaw. The impact sent the Georgian sprawling forward on his face for a count of nine. He was so weak after regaining his feet that Referee George Blake stepped between the fighters, awarding victory to Schmeling.

Stribling had the advantage for the first five rounds, but thereafter it was all Schmeling. The champion showed greater endurance and a much better knowledge and skill at infighting. He repeatedly raked Strib's body with wallops that hurt. These sallies gradually wore down the Georgian until he was an easy mark for the crushing right to the jaw that in effect terminated the bout. The fight by rounds:

TENTH ROUND.—Schmeling, growing stronger as the match progressed crowded Strib into a corner and sacked both hands to the

SCHMELING'S ROUND.

FOURTEENTH ROUND—Strib, aware that only a knockout could win him the bout, threw all he had into a left hook. It was partly blocked. Schmeling staggered Strib with a right to the head. It was the hardest punch of the match. The champion chased Strib around the ring to land a light left. They both scored lefts to the jaw. Strib hung on when Schmeling opened up with a rally to the body. Schmeling's right cracked against Strib's jaw, and his left twice found the Georgian's nose. Schmeling was hammering the body when the bell ended the round.
SCHMELING'S ROUND.

Max Greatly Improved; Is Real Champion

ling seemed groggy and Max was fairly running forward in his anxiety to meet him. Stribling realized he was beaten, and his strength was ebbing, but there was not the least evidence of a desire to chuck it or quit—only the desire to stick to the finish. True, he was clinching as all fighters do when the battle is turning against them, and as Stribling frequently has done when winning, but in my opinion it was not a question of courage but only of fatigue, the fatigue of a thoroughly beaten fighter.

Just as it seemed the bout would go the stipulated limit, Stribling stepped forward to go into a clinch. Max's right shot out to the jaw instead of the body and Stribling measured his length on the canvas. He struggled to his feet at nine, but upon Schmeling's appeal that he did not wish to strike again, Referee Blake stopped the battle, which made the result a technical knockout.

Max Looks Like the Goods.

Schmeling, better than in his previous fight, surprisingly better to those of us who had not seen him at his training camp, looked like a good fighter tonight—not a boxer yet, not a clever fighter, but one who will improve in boxing and whose dogged determination and fighting heart will make him a difficult man to defeat. At least, he now has far more friends as a fighter than ever before. Those who have been among his most severe detractors will admit he has qualities and possibility of development to become a true champion.

'He Never Hurt Me,' Max Says After Battle

Somebody had forgotten the keys. In the excitement nobody knew where they were, so the big German threw his shoulder at the door, attempting to break it open. Then somebody climbed through a window and unfastened the lock from the inside.

"Several times Stribling hit me low," Schmeling said, "but I was not hurt. He is a tricky fighter and hard to beat, but I kept right on going and I knew I would win."

"After the fourth round I could see that I was gaining and I kept trying for a knockout in every round, taking some chances to do it," he said:

"After the sixth round I knew that I had him weakening. I was just as fresh at the end as when I started and could have fought 15 rounds more."

Schmeling's Fierce Body Attack Batters Stribling Into Helplessness in 15 Rounds

the face. Stribling seemed startled by this momentary breach of good manners, but Schmeling explained with one of those little flicks of the hand and they rubbed it off the score by mutual consent. Once after that Schmeling had Stribling's head under the top rope and might have reached over to hit without creating a precedent, instead of which he raised his arms, smiled, and backed away.

Schmeling Never Flinches.

Schmeling never flinched when Stribling was fresh and stabbing his face in the early rounds. He always went forward and made Willie give ground by his game, methodical plan of battle.

This victory was really his fight for the title. He won a doubtful championship a year ago, but tonight he confirmed his claim and he left the ring clearly the dominant heavyweight fighter.

Stribling began to fall in the sixth round when Schmeling, after a leisurely beginning, went to work on his body. The truth is that Willie, after ten years of intense exploitation in the ring, was burned out at the age of 27 years scant and notwithstanding a strong body hadn't the engine power to carry him on.

Stribling's father and mother, too confident of their son's stamina and too well satisfied with their own judgment, had been campaigning him continuously for ten years and his failure tonight finally explained why he had failed so often before in fights with first class men. When he met fighters who could punch with him, Stribling just wasn't there. It wasn't his courage that had failed him against Berlenbach, Sharkey and Loughran but his strength, and tonight Schmeling brought all this out.

Proves His Courage.

Willie was knocked dizzy in the tenth round and from that time until the end it took a brave fighter to go on against a fellow who was to be strong enough at the finish to heave him up lightly in his arms and run across the ring with him.

Stribling's style was precisely the same tonight as it always had been. He began slowly, and Schmeling, with fifteen rounds to travel, was content to let Willie make the pace, apparently divining that Stribling was not a fifteen rounder. Stribling popped Max in the face with long lefts which outreached and outsped Schmelings' left jab, and ran up an advantage in the first five rounds.

Schmeling took no such punishment at any stage of the fight tonight as he received in the first three rounds of the bout in which he won the world title from Jack Sharkey a year ago. Stribling did not have the punch at any stage, and his most savage blow, a wild right uppercut swung from below, which might have knocked Max over, was always just long enough on the way to enable Schmeling to pull away.

Hardly a Mark on Max.

Schmeling evaded almost as many punches by rolling and ducking as he blocked by sticking up his gloves in the European style of defense, and the only mark of battle that he wore when he ran a fast hundred yards to his dressing room was a slightly swelling over his eye, a souvenir of round one.

Far from deteriorating during a year's absence from the ring, Schmeling had improved his boxing and sharpened that right hand for the chin, something like Gene Tunney's but much more accurate, which wins by a process of attrition.

The fight was the first sporting event to be held in the new Cleveland stadium, which was opened the night before with a public singing party. With 100,000 seats available, the premises appeared to be much less than half full and the attendance was guessed at in figures ranging from 30,000 to 40,000.

CROWD ARRIVES EARLY

The crowd began to trickle away from the center of town toward the arena as early as 4 p. m., but the carpenters were just completing their work on the fresh pine structure of the field platform where the ringside, or $25, seats were established. The new stadium, built at public expense, was completed only recently, and the fight for the heavyweight championship was in the nature of a dedicatory exercise. The infield of the ball yard, which will be used under lease by the Cleveland Indians of the American league, was covered with a great pine floor or mat to protect the new sward and the ring was pitched at the pitcher's box.

The Madison Square Garden corporation of Ohio, a subsidiary and dummy of the New York Garden firm, had accommodations for about 100,000 patrons of all grades from $3 per head to $25, but there was no expectation that the plant would be filled this time. There was the depression, a harsh personal reality for thousands of people in the great industrial regions of Ohio and Michigan, and there was the unfortunate public impression that the heavyweight championship wasn't really at stake at all.

Germany Hears Radio Account of Max's Triumph

BERLIN, July 4.—(AP)—Thousands of Germans sat up through this warm summer night to listen to a radio broadcast, varied with talks by sports experts of the Schmeling-Stribling fight at Cleveland.

They filled the cafés after the usual closing hour, sitting over their beers while the news came from America. The radio transmission was very good.

Remember Sharkey's Showing.

Jack Sharkey had beaten Stribling in a ten round fight and had given Schmeling a furious clouting for three rounds before fouling him in New York.

The sun glare of the last two weeks in Ohio was in no degree diminished today, but as evening came the heat abated slightly and there came across the arena an occasional freshet of breeze from Lake Erie just a short piece away.

The platform was adorned and cluttered over head with the usual elaborate fittings for lighting the ring and hurling the sounds of carnage with the most intimate reality into every American home equipped with a radio. In addition, there soared above the familiar machinery of the ring the strange forms of two huge mechanical blowers encased in screens. The size of small windmills, these fans had been improvised from the ventilation equipment used in factories to blow away the swarms of a local bug or fly known as the Canadian soldier which comes down the lake for a week or so at this time every year to make life less pleasant for the citizens along the lower coast. They are a large, dumb, squashy form of insect life, sailing on clumsy wings, with no idea of where they want to go nor any notion of the way to get there.

Make Slippery Surface.

At some open air fights in the evening during their season the Canadian soldiers have covered the ring, imparting a banana skin footing for the athletes, and it was to avert any mishap to Schmeling and Stribling, due to this cause, that the management decided to blow the Canadian soldiers into the customers' faces on one side of the ring. Perhaps the Ohioans shouldn't call these pests Canadian soldiers. It might rile the Canadian soldiery.

Mr. Sleepless Nate Lewis, the Chicago prize fight matchmaker, the best friend of the clannish Stribling family, had spent his waking hours of the night before the battle, prowling and peering and bending an ear about town to learn any little thing he might happen to learn about the trend of the betting and any artificial reasons therefore. Considering the character of some of the people with whom Mr. Joe Jacobs, the manager of Schmeling, has carried on business relations, it was wise of Mr. Lewis to do this. Mr. Jacobs has friends in the gambling business, for instance, who might yield to temptation, for they are only poor, weak mortal men after all, and having bet on Schmeling, take steps to protect their money.

Sound of Feet; It's the Cops.

At a quarter after five the gritty sound of wide feet marching on concrete sounded through the catacombs beneath the grandstand and a portly police officer, magnificent in gold devices and black velvet lapels, filed down the ramp at the head of a detail of 300 cops. They halted at the main gates where one unfortunate squad was detached to control traffic there, far from the ring and out of sight. The men took their posts with plain reluctance and the force was just about to march again when the commander, by name Inspector Horgan, called bluntly, "Hey, you, and you," whereupon two youngsters fell out and took up places guarding the telegraph office.

There being no further details to be assigned here, the rest of the army brightened and marched into the arena to see the fight, cheering the boys in the rear with cries of "So long, Hogan. You can read all about it in the papers."

The Cleveland cop is smarter than most. He wears a coat with his uniform and keeps it clean; his shoes are brushed and he carries an old fashioned stick with red tassels at the handle. The shield on his cap depicts some bird with a couple of fistfuls of hay, probably an eagle, although most of these eagles on shields and seals might easily be taken for turkeys or blue jays.

Loughran Like Hack Driver.

A flying boat with lines of a Hoboken ferry wabbled around the stadium close to the roof and flopped like a pelican into the lake near the arena to land some passengers from Schmeling's training camp at Conneaut Lake Park, Pa.

Tommy Loughran, who has licked Stribling, was the first prize fighter seen on the premises. Tommy was taking a hack driver's holiday, a prize fighter come hundreds of miles to see a couple of colleagues have a fight.

James J. Johnston, promoter of the recent unique affair between Primo Carnera and Pat Redmond in New York, toured the ringside describing the brutal spectacle in horrible detail and promising that his impending Sharkey-Walker production would be even more brutal. Mr. Redmond went into Mr. Johnston's ring advertised as a round heel and guaranteed not to cause Primo any embarrassment, compliant with a court order forbidding Primo to meet a dangerous opponent. Notwithstanding Mr. Johnston's public assurance that Patrick was a bum, the spectacle drew $40,000 on a rainy night.

First Fighters Appear.

At 8:15, with maybe 25,000 customers on hand and the so-called ringside seats, covering the entire infield and part of the outfield, more than half filled, a young man in white pants and blue coat and with goose grease on his red hair, took the ring to greet the customers and introduce the first pair of fighters. They were George Panka of Pittsburgh and Frank Cawley of Pittston, Pa., a sparring partner who had worked with Schmeling. Fat Eddie Mead handled Panka and the ring took a sharp list when he mounted the corner to breathe in his young man's ear between rounds. On his right upper arm Panka wore a tattooed picture of a boxer leading with his chin.

Tunney Wears Large Hat.

Bernard Gimble, New York department store magnate, came in during the first preliminary, a mourning band on his left sleeve. Gene Tunney was with him but paused to shake hands with some customers in the first row and became the center of a local social furore as the people in the nearby seats edged up to shake his hand. He wore a gray suit, a ruddy sunburn and a hat as big as a courthouse dome made of some kind of hay.

Cawley won the decision from Panka after five laborious rounds.

Next in the ring were George Pavlik, a Cleveland boy who had sparred with Stribling, and Frank Morris, a New York youth whose features and shoe-brush hair cut imparted a faint resemblance to Tunney; light heavyweights both. Pavlik, a skinny lad well over six feet tall, let fly a right to the chin and put Morris down for nine seconds in round one. The crowd raised a generous salute for the New York boy when he weathered a bad round.

There was a great rumble bumble during the fight, and at the edge of the stadium two blimps idled across the sky, their cabins alight and presumably crowded with spectators. Pavlik won the decision over Morris in five rounds.

Crowd Becomes Larger.

The third fight revealed to the crowd Nate Brown of Chicago, the sparring partner who gave Max Schmeling two days of worry and abuse and suddenly vanished from the camp, and Battling Bozo of Birmingham, Ala. This Brown said he was ill when he went away from Schmeling's place, but he seemed robust enough this evening, and it was possible to infer that he was induced to resign from Conneaut Lake Park because he embarrassed the champion.

Bozo wore a dizzy expression on a comic-strip countenance surmounting a comic-strip figure. He stands six feet or more and as wide as a length of string, but the Stribling influence was apparent in his inoffensive, clutching style. Bozo winked and flirted and bobbed and stretched and no harm was inflicted on either side, he being too jocular and Brown too much confused by the nut before him. Paw Stribling came down to the ringside for the first time of the evening to handle Bozo, being manager of the same.

Bozo won the decision in five rounds.

Celebrities at Microphone.

The red haired boy with the goose grease on his locks, now came to the microphone and read a list of some of the celebrities present, including a little more than the usual percentage of phonies. He asked old Jim Corbett to step up and Jim made a bit of speech through the little tin can, which magnifies sound, to be followed by Tunney, who blushed and said, "Hello, everybody; I hope we're going to see a good fight and I hope the best man, that is the better man, wins."

Bobby Jones climbed to the apron and said, "I've been here long enough to see that this ring is no place for me."

Primo Carnera was expressing the hope that the best man would win the fight when Stribling entered his corner with his father, Tommy Loughran climbed up among the photographers. That tense moment was at hand.

Schmeling entered wearing a gray figured bathrobe. Stribling walked over to take his hand and they smiled and parted. Stribling wore the star emblem of the air service on the back of his plain dark blue robe. The boys posed together with George Blake, the referee, between them, Stribling rather grim, Schmeling with an unconcerned smile, and then the fight began.

Stribling Claims Blow to Head in 11th Licked Him

Stribling gave credit to Schmeling for a clean victory but said it was an injustice for the fight to have been stopped with only 14 seconds to go.

It was a blow in the eleventh round that beat him, Stribling thought.

"Schmeling hit me a peculiar blow high on the head to my left side," Stribling said. After that he knew he was beaten.

"If Schmeling's body blows hurt me," he added, "I didn't feel them."

He felt "all right," and his handlers said he wasn't hurt much. Both eyes were cut, his lips bruised, and his nose cut.

Pa Stribling mildly criticized Schmeling for not winning by a knockout after the tenth.

Both Pa and Stribling's handlers blamed six weeks' training grind for his defeat.

"Ma" Stribling and Mrs. Stribling Jr. smiled, but it was no secret they were heartbroken. Both kissed Stribling and simply said "Hello" when they entered his dressing room.

Happy Scouts Finish Long Canoe Cruise

BY BOB BECKER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Ladysmith, Wis., July 3.—Swinging down the Flambeau river under a bright, hot sun while maneuvering their canoes in special diamond and wedge formations, the Chicago Boy Scouts who make up THE TRIBUNE'S fourth annual canoeing and camping expedition slipped into Ladysmith late this afternoon to end their thrilling trip down this fast water river.

As the husky, sun tanned Scouts spun their canoes in the current and jauntily beached them at Ladysmith's Memorial park, they gave a cheer for the crowd which was waiting for them on the bank and then scurried for the water to take a final scrubbing before donning their regulation uniforms for the trip to Chicago tonight. The party left this evening over the Soo line, arriving at Chicago at 8:05 tomorrow morning.

Scouts Set Record.

The Scouts came into town today with a Flambeau canoeing record that is causing considerable comment among the residents, because this river has thrown many a canoeist for a loss. But the boys concluded their trip without a tip over, without the loss of any baggage and without seriously ramming a single canoe, a record even these veteran river guides did not believe possible.

Fighting mosquitoes, paddling under a blazing sun on most days, and camping far from towns during the whole trip, the Chicago lads also have come through without a single case of illness or severe sunburn. They start home tonight in fine fettle, brown as mahogany and hard as nails after more than a week of swimming, paddling, tent pitching and high powered eating.

Last night the canoeing party made its last camp at Big Falls, where a rousing campfire was held within 600 feet of the big power dam. The evening gathering of the Scouts was a fitting climax to the trip, both because of the setting and the chance it gave the boys to tell their impressions of the trip.

Just at Sunset.

On the grass covered embankment, which parallels the dam and holds back the deep waters of the Flambeau flowage, a big campfire was laid by Ray Masek, Meredith Fairchild, Alfred Oldenburg, and Donald Michelson. Just as the last days of the setting sun were fading in the west the Scouts gathered around the fire.

Then followed a round table of short talks with every Scout telling what this trip has meant to him and which experiences stood out above all others. The companionship of fellow Scouts on the cruise, the exciting work of shooting rapids, the chances to see deer and porcupines, the opportunity to learn more about camping, woodcraft, trees, and other phases of nature were stressed by the boys as they stood before the big campfire. A vote of thanks was given to THE TRIBUNE by the Scouts for acting as host, and making possible the adventures they have had up here in the north woods country.

SHARKEY THINKS REFEREE SHOULD LET BOUT FINISH

Rochester, N. H., July 3.—(AP)—Jack Sharkey, Boston heavyweight, believes that Schmeling should have been given a chance to score a knockout over Stribling in his fight at Cleveland tonight and that the referee should have let the fight go to a finish.

Sharkey said that he would meet Schmeling any time. In his opinion the German was in much better physical condition tonight than when he [illegible] him a year ago.

not been removed, did not improve the situation. His explosion shot overcarried the green. He chipped back and took two putts for a five. Good iron play gave him the first of his six birdies on the 9th.

Von Elm's Putter Responds.

On the incoming nine he required only 13 putts for his 32, his iron shots going straight to the pin. At the tenth he had only a three footer to score for a birdie three. His mashie shot to the 13th landed two feet from the cup for another birdie. At the next green the putt for a birdie was eight feet, but George sank it, and the 16th brought him another birdie on a six foot putt. He had to hole a six footer for his 69 on the last green and he nudged it with ease.

Von Elm's collection of birdies was matched by the performance of John Kinder of Caldwell, N. J., who went from the sixth hole through the eleventh, shooting five birdies out of six greens. He finished with a card of 72, which might have been improved considerably if the hole in one by Diegel, with whom he was paired, hadn't affected him to the point of taking a 5, two over par, on the same green.

Farrell Shoots 70.

It has required two days to break par on the difficult Inverness course where Ted Ray won the open title for England in 1920 and only Von Elm and Farrell have succeeded in doing it. Johnny's 70 didn't compare with George's 69, for it was a conservative round throughout.

His iron shots were suche that he was putting for birdies during the entire round, but didn't achieve one until the ninth, where he clipped within six feet of the pin and holed out. He birdied the fourteenth with an approach shot dead to the pin. He wound up his rough on the long fifteenth and a two over par six. He evened by getting another birdie on the

13 YACHTS RACE TO MILWAUKEE FOR CLINCH CUP

Chicago's holiday yacht racing events started last night when thirteen cruisers set sail off Belmont harbor in the first annual race to Milwaukee sponsored by the Chicago Yacht club. The winner will receive the George Owen Clinch Memorial trophy.

With a strong northwest wind blowing, all boats got off to a good start with the exception of A. E. Pierce's Quicksilver, which is valued at $50,000 and conceded the best chance to capture the race. The Quicksilver was disqualified by the race committee when it failed to make a proper start, but last night it was racing toward Milwaukee.

A coast guard boat was immediately summoned to inform its skipper of the disqualification, but failed to catch up to the Quicksilver as it streaked past its rivals and took the lead. Officials predicted that if the Quicksilver maintained its speed it would be the first to finish.

This morning at 10 o'clock star class sloops will compete in the first of a series of five races to determine the sloop which will represent Lake Michigan in the annual International Star event at Fort Washington, L. I., Sept. 11 to 18.

Commodore O. E. Nadeau, who won the Evinrude trophy with his Alice Dee last year, will defend the cup this morning when more than 40 power yachts race to Milwaukee in the annual meet. The boats will start off Oak street gap at 9 o'clock.

Some of the fastest racing yachts on the south end of the lake will compete this afternoon in the 4th of July regatta of the Jackson Park Yacht club off Van Buren street. The regatta will start at 2.

The program includes a match race between the Alert IV., owned and piloted by Charles D. Wiman, and Commodore Hollis E. Patten's Calypso. The Alert IV. is the leading "R" sloop of the season and has won many events for Wiman on the west coast. George F. Getz Jr.'s Eagle Aquilla and the Orn, owned by Dr. G. G. Davis, will meet in another match event. Many of the Chicago star fleet will be racing off Wilmette in the international elimination regatta but the rest are entered in the Jackson park club's open race.

New York, July 3.—[Special.]—Augustus F. Goodwin's Land Boy made a procession of the Hempstead Plains steeplechase at Aqueduct today and earned $1,025, the richest purse of the day, and pieces of plate for his owner, trainer also for his rider, J. V. H. Davis.

The test of two miles and a half, for hunters, five years old and upward, attracted many visitors from New England where Land Boy has scared some of his most notable victories. He was six lengths in front at the end and was about the safest 7 to 10 shot that has run at Aqueduct in many a day.

By contrast Ral Parr's Her Grace, driven down to 7 to 10 in the fashion plate, came in second, beaten three-quarters of a length by the Goodeve stable's Blind Lane.

That filly by Blind Play from Silver Lane was saddled by Max Hirsch, who has been running in a long streak of hard luck this last spring and summer. Blind Lane must have put a silver lining in the dark cloud, however, for she closed at 5 to 1.

Unencumbered, saving ground in the early running, raced Dancing Boy into defeat and drew out to a safe lead in the last eighth. Night Vintage came gamely in the last quarter, but was no match for winner. Gay Party was going well at finish. Expertus made up much ground in last half mile. Dancing Boy tired badly. Rara Avis was all over the track after breaking slowly, but was going fast at finish. Casimira soon dropped back after outbreaking the others. Escoba Land tired badly.

Icicle, fencing in faultless style under a fearless ride, came fast when called upon and, passing the early leaders approaching the last jump, won easily. Madiola was close up from the start and jumped and raced well all the way. Crumpler cleared the obstacles in good style, but lacked the necessary speed on the flat. Cahanemore opened up a long lead soon after the start, but tired during the final turn of the field. Acrobate II. and Silver Dawn II. seemed outclassed.

Procession, quickly, had much early speed and, displaying gameness when challenged by Eight Twenty, saved ground and outfinished the latter. Eight Twenty moved up to get his nose in front after going half the distance and raced well to the finish. Buck Leary was never far from the pace. Pal To Pal was going fairly well at end. Dusky Boy met with interference and was never dangerous. Thunwin weakened.

Epithet, apparently much the best, was under restraint in the early running, then came to the outside of Martha Jones at the stretch turn to pass her easily and win in front of Maid of Honor. Latter, racing well, got to the front of Epithet after a quarter and raced to the finish, but was no match for the winner. Maid of Honor was in close quarters around the far turn, but saved ground thereafter and raced well to the finish. Tom Mongol lacked speed and was never a serious contender. The Mongol made up some ground in the stretch.

Pancho was outrun early, but came to the outside of the leaders at the stretch turn and quickly taking command was going away at the finish. Who Win saved much ground around the stretch turn to close well, but did not threaten the winner. High Foot went to the front in the first quarter and opened up a handy lead, but tired in the last furlong. Calf Roper was used up trying to keep up with High Foot in the early stages and had little left for the final. Karl Eitel stopped badly.

Waterport, always within striking distance of the leaders, moved up fast to take command rounding the stretch turn, and held Bubola in the final run. Bubola was in a forward position at all times and raced gamely to the end. Thomas Seth made up some ground in the stretch to best Princess Edith. Latter weakened in the final furlong. Mardie showed much early speed and was racing well when he was shut off by Bubola at the stretch turn. Master Ace was badly outrun. Sir John K. acted badly at the barrier and was started from the extreme outside.

Durva, always well up, improved her position in the last quarter, and closing fast caught Show Down near the end to win driving money. Show Down took a good lead approaching the stretch turn, but hung near the finish. Bud McFarland, probably best, was forced to pull up rounding the far turn when in close quarters, but came again and was going well at the finish. Lady Va Va showed to good advantage. Miss Perfection and Lillian Tobin tired badly after showing early speed. Peace Princess met with early interference.

Parr Trainer Sends Stable to Arlington

Roy Carruthers, general manager at Arlington Park, had word from Belmont Park yesterday that Elmer Trueman, trainer of the stables of Ral Parr, Howard Bruce and others, would ship tomorrow with the Greentree stable of Mrs. Helen Hay Whitney, of which Twenty Grand is the outstanding star. Her Grace, winner of last October's Maryland handicap, is Trueman's ace. She is a daughter of Bright Knight and Markiluna, and an Arlington Matron, Arlington Cup and Arlington Handicap eligible. Ral Parr owns her. She finished third to Mokatam and Questionnaire in the last Suburban handicap at Belmont Park.

Frank Catrone, one of the most successful jockeys of eastern racing, will come next week to ride A la Carte in the Classic.

W. A. Harris will arrive from Belmont Park tomorrow with Rigan McKinney's jumpers, Inception and Nay Clyman, and a couple belonging to Thomas Hitchcock.

Boys Howdy and Knights Call returned to Arlington yesterday from Latonia.

Albert D. Lasker, one of the directors of the Arlington Park Jockey club, will be the host of Charles Curtis, Vice President of the United States; Mayor Anton Cermak of Chicago, Mrs. John Hertz, Mrs. Lasker, and John Hertz, chairman of the executive committee of the Arlington Park Jockey club, at a luncheon party in the Post and Paddock clubhouse tomorrow.

Antony Pelleteri of New Orleans is authority for the statement that his colt, Proteus, the winner of eight of his thirteen races this season, among them revivals of the Curran Memorial at Washington Park, the Bashford Manor at Churchill Downs, and the Idle Hour at Lexington, was not so badly injured when he was caught in a jam in the Hyde Park at Arlington as was at first believed. His cuts and abrasions are superficial. Far from being even temporarily disabled, Proteus is ready to resume galloping.

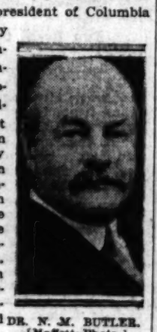
YESTERDAY'S PUZZLE SOLVED

DR. BUTLER URGES ECONOMIC PARLEY OF BUSINESS MEN

Educator Says Nations Move Too Slowly.

LONDON, July 3.—(AP)—Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university, today proposed an international conference of economists and business leaders, not one of whom would have any official connection with any government, which would formulate a program to free the world of economic depression. The American educator suggested the conference be called immediately.



DR. N. M. BUTLER. [Moffett Photo.]

"If these men could agree quickly, their findings would make a tremendous appeal to public opinion at this time," he said. "Even if the plan produced could never be applied, the psychological effect would be phenomenal."

The international chamber of commerce, he said, might be the best possible medium for organizing such a gathering.

Names Likely Leaders.

To illustrate the type of man who would be useful at such a conference, Dr. Butler named Sir William Henry Beveridge and J. M. Keynes, English economists; Gustav Cassel of Sweden, Charles Gide of France, Moritz Bonn of Germany, Profs. Edwin R. A. Seligman, Wesley T. Mitchell, and Robert Murray Haig of Columbia university; Montagu Norman, governor of the bank of England; Sir Robert Horne, former British chancellor of the exchequer; Sir Josiah Stamp, British economist; Silas Strawn, American lawyer; Albert H. Wiggin, New York banker, and W. W. Atterbury, American railway magnate.

Would Exclude Russia.

"It is my belief," Dr. Butler declared, "that such a conference could accomplish more toward putting the world on its feet than any number of slow moving official conferences by governments."

Dr. Butler would include all the world except Russia, which, he said, is operating on a different system.

CHICAGO'S DEATH RATE INCREASES SLIGHTLY IN 1931

Still Below Average for 89 Cities.

Chicago's death rate increased during the first six months of the present year, as compared to the same period last year, it was shown yesterday by the semi-annual report issued by Health Commissioner Bundesen.

But while Chicago's death rate, on an annual basis, was 11.4 per 1,000 from January to June of this year, as compared to 11.2 per 1,000 for the same period last year, it was still well below the average for the eighty-one American cities which maintain standard health statistics.

Dr. Bundesen laid the increased rate to two principal causes. A wave of influenza and pneumonia in January and February increased deaths from those diseases. There were 318 deaths from influenza, more than double the 145 reported in the first half of 1930, and 1,876 deaths from pneumonia, as compared to 1,682 in the 1930 period.

Cases of measles statistics show, are more prevalent every alternate year, and the fact that 1931 is the heavy year is a second cause cited for the increased death rate. Whereas there were only 807 cases and eight deaths from measles in the first six months of 1930, there have been 10,662 cases and 51 deaths to date this year. Deaths from spinal meningitis also increased, from 98 to 144.

Many more deaths from diphtheria could be prevented if parents of affected children would call a physician immediately instead of waiting until the third or fourth day of the disease, Dr. Bundesen stated. The diphtheria prevention campaign has resulted in 135,000 out of the 600,000 school children being immunized, and plans are being laid for a more extensive drive, which, it is hoped, will increase the immunization of children to 85 per cent.

FEWER FAILURES INDICATE TURN FOR BETTER DUE

Trend of Defaults Is Lower in June.

Security and commodity exchanges throughout the country will be closed today in observance of Independence day. Banks and other business houses will also be closed.

BY O. A. MATHER.

Major depressions result in a survival of the fittest among business enterprises. And the bottom of depression usually is reached and recovery begun when business mortality wanes. It is a painful process, perhaps, but it does result in affording a sounder basis for the ensuing upward cycle.

Illustrative of this process, the report on insolvencies for June issued by R. G. Dun & Co., is more favorable than for many months past. The number of failures was considerably reduced and while liabilities continued heavy, owing to some defaults of unusual size, the total was much less than for June, 1930. There were 1,923 business failures in the United States last month and total liabilities were $21,957,562. These figures compare with 2,026 defaults in June, last year, and total indebtedness of $65,130,762.

Smallest Since September.

Last month's reduction in the number of failures, compared with the corresponding month of the previous year, was the first in more than 15 months, or since November, 1929. Furthermore, the June total was the smallest since last September. The decline from June to June, this year, has been marked, being equivalent to 40 per cent, whereas in 1930 it was 26½ per cent.

Total indebtedness involved in failures also has shown a decline of 45 per cent from January to June, whereas in 1930 there was an increase for the corresponding period. For the first half of this year there were 9,107 business failures with liabilities aggregating $370,607,369. This compares with 13,771 failures in the first half of 1930 and 13,384 during the first half of 1929, a period when financial conditions were particularly disturbed. In no preceding half year have failures been as heavy as this year and the liabilities also were larger than the $327,089,083 of a year ago, although not as large as the record total of $373,716,338 established in the first half of 1922.

Bank Clearings Increase.

Further evidence of some improvement is given in Bradstreet's report that bank clearings last month totaled $6,389,731,000 at 125 cities, an increase of 5.4 per cent over May but a decline of 20.8 per cent from June, 1930.

Clearings for the second quarter of this year totaled $116,018,564,000, a gain of 3.9 per cent over the first quarter but a decline of 21.7 per cent from the second quarter of 1930. Clearings for the first half of this year totaled $225,845,180,000, a decline of 21.3 per cent from the first half of 1930.

MAIL ORDER SALES

Sales of the big mail order concerns generally are doing somewhat better. Montgomery Ward & Co. reported sales at $19,219,235, a decline of 11.1 per cent from the $23,929,300 of June, 1930, but making a better relative comparison than the 26 per cent decline shown for May in comparison with the same month in 1930. Sales for the first half of this year were $83,087,894, a gain of 10.26 per cent over the $30,007,418 of the first half of 1930.

Reviews June Financing.

New financing in June totaled $423,-[illegible],784, which was slightly below the May volume, according to the monthly review of Lawrence Stern & Co., investment bankers. The decrease was due entirely to a smaller volume of short offerings. Continuing the tendency of recent months, the bulk of new offerings was in high grade public utility and tax exempt bonds. Stock and bond financing for the first half of this year totaled $2,908,655,429, a decline of about 40 per cent from the volume registered in the same period in 1930. Bond offerings totaled more than $2,350,000,000, or about 65 per cent and 90 per cent respectively of the totals for the corresponding periods in 1930 and 1929.

Reach No Agreement on Prairie-Sinclair Merger

Independence, Kas., July 3.—(AP)—W. A. Pinkstrick, chairman of the board of the Prairie Oil and Gas company, said today no agreement had been reached regarding consolidation of the company with the Sinclair Consolidated Oil corporation. He added reports of a definite merger were based on nothing tangible. "No consolidated plan has been worked out and agreed to," he said. "The matter has been discussed around the table, but nothing definite has been decided so far as the Prairie company is concerned."

Holds Public Responsible for Plight of Railroads

BY SCRUTATOR.

The "Railway Age," spokesman for the railroads, in its current issue publishes an editorial entitled "Public Responsibility for Railway Situation."

"The necessity for the interstate commerce commission to pass upon an application of the railways for a general advance in freight rates at this time," says the editorial, "illustrates that once the public interferes extensively with the management of an industry it is sure to find, sooner or later, that those who call the tune must also pay the piper."

It goes on to explain that the carriers' problems can only be solved by an increase in rates because the public through its regulatory bodies has put the railroads in such position that other solutions are impossible.

A point is made of the fact that the interstate commerce commission has forbidden the railways to make lower rates for longer than for shorter hauls to meet the competition of steamships operating through the Panama canal.

Cites Truck Competition.

"The competition of motor trucks," says Railway Age, "is principally for short hauls, but, without the permission of the commission, the railways cannot reduce their rates for these short hauls to meet competition without also reducing their rates for longer hauls."

Reference is made to expressions by various individuals of the opinion that there are many miles of unprofitable railroad lines which should be torn up and replaced by motor bus and truck lines, thereby providing adequate transportation at much lower cost.

"Under existing laws," is Railway Age's answer to this, "railway service cannot be reduced below an uncertain minimum, and railway lines cannot be torn up at all, without the authorization of state and national government regulating bodies, and petitions for authorization to reduce service or tear up lines are constantly being denied."

Well Taken Position.

These are positions well taken. But they are particularly interesting in view of the railroad executives' contention that they are asking for higher rates because they have cut expenses "to the bone" and still revenues are not sufficient.

Thus, apparently when they say they have reached the limit in economy of operation they mean that they have done all that is permitted them by regulatory bodies.

In applying to the interstate commerce commission for relief they could take one of two positions. Either request permission to put into effect additional economies and policies dictated by good business judgment directed toward establishing the railroads on a sounder basis with respect to competitive carriers and changed business conditions or ask for a general raise in rates.

The first would have been a constructive step toward a permanent settlement of the troubles afflicting the railroads. But it would probably have encountered stiff opposition. The second held out the hope of more immediate relief, although even if granted it can hardly be considered a move toward an ultimate solution of the railroad dilemma.

Carriers Are Hamstrung.

The carriers are hamstrung with regulative restrictions arising out of attempts by politicians to help everybody but the railroads. They have been brought to a place where they cannot use their own ingenuity to work out of a bad situation; and the public, in whose interest this anomalous situation has supposedly been created, is faced with a stiff increase in transportation costs as a special bonus.

The railroads under the doctoring of regulatory bodies are suffering from an overdose of the wrong kind of medicine. And yet they have recently taken the peculiar stand that the same regulative cureall should be administered to motor trucks and other common carriers.

Perhaps a restoration to the railroads of some of their freedom to meet conditions as they exist would be a more successful form of treatment. If regulation has squeezed the profit out of the railroad business and still doesn't insure the public against high freight charges it is hardly a tonic to be prescribed for other forms of transportation.

STOCKHOLDERS OF COTTON BELT TAKE S. P. OFFER

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 3.—Stockholders of St. Louis Southwestern railway company, among them many of the largest holders of preferred and common, are accepting the offer of the Southern Pacific company for minority holdings at a satisfactory rate, according to those in close touch with the situation. By way of illustration it was stated that acceptance today had been received from a holder of 4,000 shares. Most of the holders of large blocks of Cotton Belt have decided to accept the Southern Pacific offer.

This offer, announced June 6, was for three shares of Southern Pacific for each five shares of Cotton Belt preferred and one share of Southern Pacific for each three shares of Cotton Belt common. Making the exchange effective depends on Southern Pacific being assured of 85 per cent control and on approval of the control by the interstate commerce commission.

Midwest Shoemakers Enjoying Volume Business

Reports indicate that shoe manufacturers, particularly in the middle west, are having volume business, Dun's says in its weekly review. At some eastern centers the output is also the heaviest in eight years, with capacity production at some plants sufficient to keep factories employed until September and good sized orders reported in sight. Improved conditions in the leather markets are developing rapidly. Sole leather is selling in larger quantities with a much improved demand and prices are strengthening.

Estimate 38 Per Cent for Youngstown Operations

Dow, Jones & Co. estimate that steel operations in the Youngstown district next week are likely to rebound to approximately 38 per cent of capacity after falling below 30 per cent during the Independence day shutdown. Before the holiday operations were at 41 per cent, but it is apparent that pipe business awarded to valley makers in recent weeks has been offset by slackness in other lines.

N. Y. STOCK EXCHANGE QUESTIONS MEMBERS ON EMPLOYES' TRADING

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 3.—For the purpose of informing itself regarding the extent of margin trading operations of employes of stock exchange firms, the committee on quotations and commissions of the exchange has sent a questionnaire to members reading as follows:

"Are any of your customers' men or other employes permitted to trade on margin for their own account?

"If so will you kindly furnish the committee with a list of such individuals whose personal trading accounts aggregate more than 5,000 shares in the last six months."

The inquiry is believed to be part of the movement inaugurated by the exchange about a year ago to eliminate the practices followed by a considerable number of customers' men during the 1929 bull market which led to widespread criticism.

It was suggested in several quarters today that the exchange is particularly anxious to learn whether any member firms are employing traders in the guise of customers' men. It is common knowledge in the street that firms have been approached by traders with various schemes for obtaining rebates on their commissions. Most of these traders operate actively, and their business usually runs into large commissions.

On more than one occasion, it is said, stock exchange firms have been solicited to put such traders on their pay rolls as customers' men to circumvent the exchange rule forbidding any rebating of commissions. Any employé of a stock exchange firm who wishes to trade on margin is required by the rules of the exchange to have the written permission of his employer. This is covered by the general rules governing margin trading by employes of banks, insurance companies and other financial concerns.

I. C. C. ORDERS LOWER RATE ON GRAIN FREIGHT

Washington, D. C., July 3.—(AP)—Lowered rates on grain shipped from producing points throughout the west, the southeast, the Mississippi valley and the southwest today were ordered by the interstate commerce commission to become effective Aug. 1.

The rates were revised under the commission's investigation of the general rate structure of the country provided in the Hoch-Smith law. Originally they were to have become effective June 1. The railroads, claiming the new schedules would cause losses running high into the millions of dollars, secured an injunction last May in federal court at Chicago. This order stayed the rates until July 6. The injunction was vacated by the court several days ago.

The commission in its original opinion took cognizance of the complaints of the railroads that heavy reductions of rates on grain would cripple them. In its opinion it said:

"We are satisfied that the readjustment will not threaten the maintenance of an adequate system of transportation. We say this in the light of increased revenues already granted in certain other cases and in the realization that a failure of the present revision to afford adequate revenues will prompt further proceedings."

Reviews Note Firmness in Markets for Commodities

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 3.—Significant improvement in financial conditions, accompanied by a higher degree of optimistic business sentiment, marked the comment of the weekly trade reviews today.

"Operations in important primary markets are more active and there is renewed confidence in the early stabilization of commodity quotations," R. G. Dun & Co. said. "The recuperative influence of the favorable developments of the last week or two is gaining momentum.

"Support appears not only in the markets for grains, textiles, metals, and other basic materials but is reflected in the reassurance given in distributive channels, where hesitancy has long been particularly marked. Definite indications of industrial betterment are shown, although the interests helped are somewhat scattered. The manufacturers are very busy.

Wider Operating Schedules.

"Reports from important textile centers reveal wider operating schedules. Some mills are feeling the benefit of the broader demand for cotton goods. Sales of print cloths have been heavy and there is more inquiry in the fine goods market. In the automotive industry some improvement promised by several of the large manufacturers preliminary to the introduction of new models will offset the decline that has appeared in other directions."

Furniture orders were nearly 20 per cent under the seasonal normal, the report said, but radio manufacturers have fairly large orders from dealers for fall delivery. Stocks of retail merchandise in many sections were lighter at the close of June.

Retail trade throughout the country has been stimulated by hot weather and the coming holiday, Bradstreet's said. Reports from forty leading centers mentioned in a few instances that extreme heat was a drawback to shopping, but general demand for light clothing and vacation supplies raised the retail volume from last week. Larger orders were being received from wholesalers and jobbers, and in some cases volume was equal to a year ago. This branch was said to be still unsatisfactory.

Is Encouraging Feature.

The noticeable rise in Bradstreet's monthly index of commodity prices, the report said, was another encouraging feature. Twenty-nine individual articles advanced, as against only twelve on June 1, while only twenty-five were down, compared with forty-one the previous month. Tourists have been a factor in sustaining retail trade in many cities.

The Business Week said it was increasingly evident that the explosive materials for a major upswing of surprising speed and proportions were accumulating in the unprecedented credit position of the reserve system, the curious currency situation, continued imports of gold, and the abnormally unbalanced condition of commodity stocks.

CHASE DEPOSITS GAIN; TOTAL IS NOW $1,897,544,000

New York, July 3.—(AP)—The statement of the Chase National bank for June 30, 1931, published today, showed an increase in deposits over the last preceding statement, that of March 25. The total of deposits, $1,897,544,000, represented an increase of $12,735,000.

Combined capital, surplus, and undivided profits of the bank on June 30, 1931, amounted to $324,579,802, as compared with $359,006,746 on March 25. In the figures as of June 30 the bank, in accordance with its established policy, has made provision for all known losses, reduced its holdings of securities to the market value and set up substantial reserves to cover possible future contingencies.

The statement showed total assets as of June 30 of $2,429,300,216. This compares with $2,517,816,372, as reported on March 25.

Chase has been the world's largest commercial bank since its consolidation with the Equitable Trust company last year. Rumors have been heard of late that acquisition of the Corn Exchange bank might be arranged, which would bring total assets close to $3,000,000,000.

Cities Service Considers Steps Against Kas. Decree

The Cities Service company is giving consideration to the legal steps to be taken immediately to enjoin the state banking department of Kansas from enforcing its order barring all stock issues of the company except the first preferred stock from sale in Kansas, it was said at the offices of Henry L. Doherty & Co.

The order of the state banking department is considered by the bankers to be entirely arbitrary and without just cause, and was made immediately after the refusal by subsidiaries of the Cities Service company supplying natural gas in Kansas to grant the request of Gov. Harry H. Wooding that a blanket 10 per cent reduction in gas rates be made without hearing. The Kansas public service commission has set a hearing on the gas rates of the various utilities involved for Aug. 18, 1931.

Youngstown Iron, Steel Scrap Prices Marked Up

Youngstown iron and steel scrap quotations were marked up this week by a leading dealer, says a Youngstown dispatch. No. 1 heavy-melting steel is quoted at $10 to $10.50, up 50c a ton from a week ago, on the expectation that the summer lull in Youngstown steel mill operations will be less pronounced than expected.

No large sales are reported, but the largest dealer is quoting higher prices on other principal grades.

GREAT LAKES COAL CARGO CONTROVERSY UP FOR I. C. C. ACTION

Washington, D. C., July 3.—(AP)—The fourth lake cargo coal rate controversy in 19 years tonight was before the Interstate commerce commission for settlement.

With the freight rate differential on coal to the great lakes from the northern and southern bituminous regions woven into the general rail rate structure, commission officials said every effort would be made to reach a decision before hearings are begun on the proposed general increase in all freight charges.

Arguments on the present differential case growing out of a petition of operators in Pennsylvania and Ohio for an increase in the present 35 cents per ton advantage held over southern operators were concluded before the commission today.

The southern operators, representing companies in Kentucky, Virginia, and Tennessee, joined by carriers of that region, vigorously opposed the northern request. They contended the existing 35 cent differential was the maximum to be allowed northern operators in compensation for a better geographical location.

The 35 cent spread became effective as a compromise in 1928, following court injunctions restraining the commission from carrying out a 45 cent differential established in 1927. Both sides agreed a larger differential would increase northern tonnage at the expense of the southern companies.

West Virginia operators, grouped with the southern companies, entered the case with a request that they be placed in the Pennsylvania-Ohio area because of the proximity of the three fields. They are now required to pay a 23 cent differential.

Hot Weather Keeps Brake on Nearly All Meat Lines

Armour & Co. in its review of general packing house trade conditions says:

"The continuation of the general heat wave throughout the principal population centers this week kept the brakes applied to activity in the leading meat lines except for smoked meats and boiled hams, which were in good demand not only because of the warm weather but also because of the two day holiday, July 4 and 5. Beef, lamb and veal all were slow, and their dragginess resulted in lower prices for the livestock, even though receipts were somewhat lighter. Fresh pork, after a good starting effort, ran into extreme dullness as the week wore on, with prices working lower daily. Foreign business was off somewhat from the previous week, both in inquiry and shipments. Collections were only fair."

NEW EAST TEXAS OIL PRORATION IS APPROVED

Austin, Tex., July 3.—(AP)—The state railroad commission today approved a new east Texas oil proration order fixing total allowable production at 250,000 barrels daily. Proration will be on a unit basis, with twenty acres comprising a unit, each unit to be allowed the same production, regardless of potential production.

New wells will be allowed to produce 100 barrels daily pending drafting of the new schedules, which would be done every fifteen days.

Where there were two or more wells in one unit, these wells are permitted a combined production up to 750 barrels. Where only one well has been drilled on two or more units this well would be permitted a production of two units.

While the order was issued to extend until Oct. 1, the field allowable was left open to change after Aug. 1 Even members of the commission doubted the order would be 100 per cent effective. Injunction suits already had been threatened by operators opposed to proration.

BY FRED HARVEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 3—Optimistic news from Paris, where the final difficulties of the international debt situation were being ironed out, injected new life into the stock market today and prices bounded forward anywhere from 1 to 5 points. United States Steel, shining once more as the acknowledged leader of the list, crossed 105, as compared with its recent low of 93½, and finished the day showing a net gain of nearly 3 points. American Can, Consolidated Gas, General Electric, Fox Film and others of pivotal classification were buoyant at times and registered improvements of 1 to 5 points or more.

Even the railroad shares perked up and the coppers flouted fresh talk of declining metal prices by moving up with the procession. Automobile issues had a boom day and the merchandise descriptions were not half bad. Some of the best gains of the session were made in specialties, where a short interest had been built up, evidently in anticipation of the reaction on the theory that the "good news" had already been discounted by the market's advance of last week and the week before.

Active in Afternoon.

Operations reached their most vigorous stage in the afternoon as late cables indicated that an accord had been reached on the main essentials of the debt question and that formal announcement of the agreement might be expected following a further conference between Secretary Mellon and his French conferees tonight. Bidding became quite spirited in spots at intervals, but the absence of a large proportion of the trading element who had left town last night to avoid the big rush of outgoing holiday vacationists, kept the volume below what it might have been otherwise. Indeed, the total for the day amounted to only about 1,800,000 shares—a lopsided showing in view of the good price gains made.

Certain other factors which might have been claimed to the account of either side normally were converted into bullish influences on the strength of the enthusiasm generated by the advices from Paris. Thus the week's rise in brokers' loans announced after the close of business last night was hailed as indicating a growth of bullish speculation. Tobacco shares had the help of the higher retail prices set by some of the chain outlets for cigarets and the group responded with gains of 1 to 3 points.

Auto Shares Move.

The automobile shares were probably the most active group of the day, developing a fair measure of strength along the middle of the session. General Motors and Chrysler were in the van of the movement, with Nash enjoying considerable prominence.

The churning movement here undoubtedly was intended to seek to turn speculative attention to the motors in anticipation of a fairly good showing by most companies in their second quarter statements which will be available in the near future. Motors are one of the few groups, along with the tobacco shares and the public utilities, where quarterly results, now imminent, may be expected to show up quite satisfactorily. Certainly the same cannot be said of such groups as the steels, rails and coppers among others.

Oils were only moderately better. Houston again set the pace, advancing some 2 points.

Public utilities followed the trend, with advances of 1 to 3 points. Peoples Gas was prominent among the big gainers of this group.

One of the few high grade issues to run contrary to the general list was National Biscuit, which emerged with a net loss of 1½ points after being much lower. This stock has been a disappointment to its holders for some weeks now. It took little part in the Hoover bull market and has lost some 6 or 7 points in this week's setback of the market.

TRADERS WATCH DEBT PARLEY; PRICES IMPROVE

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

An undercurrent of optimism concerning the international debt negotiations lent a bullish tone to stock market operations yesterday. It was the professional element, however, that kept the tape moving, the public having apparently decided to continue in the rôle of interested observer until all the shooting is over.

The trading was an unhurried affair throughout the day. Eyes were focused on Washington and Paris, the statements which emanated from those centers failed to affect sentiment much one way or the other. The placid confidence which has persisted since the President made his memorable proposal was again in evidence.

Rises Six Points.

On the Chicago exchange transactions involving an even 100,000 shares of stock were completed. Interest was distributed among a wide variety of issues but significant price changes were confined to two stocks which have been reposing in the inactive list for months. One of these was Waukesha Motors, which darted six points on a light trade, duplicating a similar movement on the preceding day.

The Waukesha Motor company is engaged in the manufacture of gasoline engines and industrial units used in road building machinery, air compressors, oil field equipment, trucks, tractors, and buses. The firm's fiscal year will end the last of this month and the earnings report is expected shortly thereafter. Earnings last year were equivalent to $4.50 per share. The stock is now on a $4 annual dividend basis, compared with $4 previously.

The other issue to experience substantial appreciation on negligible volume of trading was the preferred stock of the National Battery company. This issue was bid up 5½ points. It was a new high price for the stock for the year, it having previously fluctuated between 20 and 25.

Cities Service to Fight Decree.

The majority of the usual volume leaders were fractionally high at the end of the day. Utilities, motors, and miscellaneous shares were well supported around previous closing prices.

There was no appreciable market reflection in Cities Service stock to the action of the Kansas state banking department in barring the sale in that state of all shares of the company except the first preferred issue. Officials announced yesterday that they would take immediate steps to fight the decree, which followed closely the refusal of the company to grant an immediate reduction of 25 per cent in rates on gas supplied to distributing companies in Kansas.

LIGHT RUN OF HAY

Receipts of hay at Chicago for Thursday and Friday combined were only 5 cars all told, arrivals on Friday being 3 timothy and 1 alfalfa. Market, due to extremely light movement for the last week, remains a firm one; ordinary quality clover and clover light timothy mixed remain difficult to sell, but otherwise there appears to be a good call for the better types of timothy and alfalfa.

Cattle and calves at Chicago Monday: Cattle, 15,000; hogs, 40,000; sheep, 18,000.

Cattle and lambs held firm on short supplies yesterday, while the hog market, weakened by a surplus carried over Thursday's session, broke sharply after a 10@15c higher opening. Cattle sales were 10@25c under the general selling the previous day.

Steers were the principal buyers in the hog market on the early bulge and took about half of the day's fresh hogs, but with some of the small packers and city butchers remaining out of the market, support was lacking toward the finish. Larger houses bought at the late decline and left only 1,000 at the close. The extreme decline of 15@20c in the 190@250 lb averages advanced to $7.60, while the general average recorded 5c at $6.25.

Hog receipts have been exceptionally small during the week. Arrivals at Chicago totaled 96,800, the smallest since last September. The total at seven markets dropped to 382,000, below any corresponding week in more than 15 years, barring 1930. Packing grades comprise a big share of deliveries and average weights are running 10 lbs heavier than two weeks ago.

The week's estimate at 256 lbs is only 1 lb under the heaviest weekly average since 1924. The trade attributed the gain in weight to the fact the grain has been cheap and also to the final winter for hog raising. Light and light butcher hogs held up well during the week, but others declined sharply, pulling the week's general average down 25c at $6.25. Only two weekly averages have been lower since 1921.

Sunday Hogs Bid $7.50.

Light weight hogs for next Monday's delivery were bid $7.50 on the "curb" market yesterday. Light, medium, and heavy for next September were offered at $8.00, while December contracts were offered at $8.00 bid. No bids were made on the spot market.

Only 1,000 cattle arrived yesterday, barely enough to establish prices in all branches of the trade. The clearance was good and sales were stronger than in the previous session. Medium and weighty beeves, which suffered most in the break a week ago, are selling mostly 25c above last week's close, while yearlings have held steady throughout all week.

Sales 1,000 lb yearlings sold at $8.75@9.25, and 1,428 lb steers brought $7.85, while commoner grades ranged downward to $5.00. Although cattle receipts at seven leading markets this week show a decrease of 20 per cent compared with a week ago, they are more than any corresponding week since 1926. The general average price of cattle for the week at $7.35 compares with $7.60 a week ago and with $8.5 a year ago.

Lambs in Demand.

Lambs met better demand at the lower price levels established during last week, and some strength was noted in sales on yesterday's run. Most sorted natives to packers brought $7.25@7.35. Matured lambs showed a sharp advance, aged lambs to packers and shippers at $2.50 down, showing fully $1.00 advance over the low point late last week.

Supplies have been running small. The total at Chicago at 50,400 was only 4,000 above the smallest weekly total since June, 1928. However, prices for the entire week averaged only $6.70, lowest since June, 1927. The low weekly average that year was $6.60.

Today, being a holiday, live stock arriving at the yards will be counted with Monday's receipts, which are expected at 16,000 cattle, 40,000 hogs, 12,000 sheep, against 12,144 cattle, 6,481 hogs, and 12,075 sheep, the previous Monday, and 23,011 cattle, 36,000 hogs, and 7,366 sheep a year ago. Last week's receipts are estimated at 46,000 cattle, 137,000 hogs, 34,000 sheep, against 48,273 cattle, 146,000 hogs and 53,490 sheep a year ago.
